Hearty Laughs Win Life Pass to Movie Theater

Dedham, Mass.—The worm turns and so do theater managers.

For years Herbert L. Ohrenberger has been insulted, cautioned and ejected by theater managers because he laughed too long and too loud at comedies.

Movies became nightmares of fear to him.

Tip-toeing theater managers haunted his dreams. But still he could not control his laughter.

Finally a manager, more of an opportunist than his colleagues, changed the rocky tenor of Ohrenberger's life.

It was during a particularly riotous comedy in a Boston theater. Ohrenberger and a party of friends were in the audience. Ohrenberger's well-developed sense of humor was touched. He howled and laughed, squirmed in his seat and laughed some more.

The audience, amused by the comedy, was elated with Ohrenberger's laugh. His solo became a chorus and the theater rocked with glee.

This time the manager asked to see him in his office, smiled and presented the laugh-leader with a life pass to the theater.
