

At The Roosevelt

Fourth and most exciting of the series of "Hopalong Cassidy" comes to the Roosevelt theater in Bonneville Friday and Saturday, October 30 and 31.

The picture is titled "The Call of the Prairie" and again features William Boyd as Jimmy Ellison in the principal role and it's chuck full of action and amusement from start to finish. Like the Hopalong films which preceded it, "Call of the Prairie" is a Clarence E. Mulford novel. The story was originally known as "Hopalong Cassidy's Protege" and the story of Johnny Nelson, Hopalong's young cow-poke pal, who attempts to clear his name after he has been accused of a crime of which he is innocent.

Beautiful Muriel Evans, playing the role of the daughter of one of the boy's enemies. Comedy relief is supplied by Chester Conklin, Willie Hays and Hank Mann, and the cast includes such topnotchers as Gene Hayes, Alan Bridge and Al

Poor Bride

which will show at the Roosevelt theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, November 1, 2 and 3, is not only one of the year's funniest romantic comedies, but it offers its audiences a personally conducted tour of New York City and its environs.

Beginning with a traffic jam on Fifth avenue, the plot carries the spectator to a realistically modern apartment, several department stores, a big dress shop, the marriage license bureau, a magistrate's court, night court, a night club, a Coney island boat, streets in the Fort George area, office buildings, a big Long Island estate and a transatlantic steamship pier.

A young bride, Miss Stanwyck, and her ambitious surveyor-husband, Gene Raymond, have their budget trouble complicated by the officious interference of the too-philanthropic playboy.

Ned Sparks and Helen Broderick participate in the comedy. Leigh Jason directed for RKO Radio.

Nuts—Any Variety

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey have poked fun at everything and the latest to get its share is the Western Thriller.

"Silly Billies," their current bit of satire showing at the Roosevelt theater Wednesday and Thursday, Noember 4 and 5, includes all the thrills that commonly provide the smash climaxes of sage-brush sagas, but as Woolsey said while the picture was filming, "No western was ever like this!"

There are various desperadoes and a stage-coach holdup. Peril rides the plains in the persons of a hundred blood-thirsty Indians. Renegade whites do their dirty work. The U. S. cavalry rides to the rescue—and arrives late. The boys are destined to dance on the lynching rope, to be scalped, to be burned at the stake, to perish in quicksand—in short, to endure all the breathtaking thrills of 20 westerns into one madcap comedy.

Lovely Dorothy Lee, who has shared dangers and laughs with the boys in nearly every picture they have made, is back in this one. Two hundred extras assisted in filming spectacular scenes of the gold rush and Indian massacre.

Belief that there is magic in certain numbers is common to many primitive and semi-civilized peoples. Individuals go through life supposedly under the guardianship of some mystical digit, while other numbers mean bad luck.

CHORUS HEAD HAS BROAD BACKGROUND

Joseph A. Finley, conductor of the Hood River male chorus, has had a wide and interesting experience in music study and teaching.

He has been choirmaster in churches in Boston, Guthrie, Okla., and Portland, where at different times he has conducted choirs in the Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, the Mount Tabor Presbyterian church, the Rose City Park Methodist Episcopal church, the First Congregational church, the Arleta Baptist church and Christian temple, where he is located at present.

He was with the Sequoia male quartet one year for the Ellison Chataqua circuit, and organized and for 16 years conducted the Portland Oratorio society numbering 175 voices, which gave annual renditions of Handel's "Messiah."

The chorus, which meets Mondays from 8 to 10 P.M. in the Riverside church, is open to any men who love music and provides competent musical and voice training.
