At The Roosevelt

A tough guy going "society" gives his three pals a pain in the neck, and they decide to do something about it in "Yours for the Asking," billed at the Roosevelt theater in Bonneville Friday and Saturday, November 6 and 7.

George Raft, patent-leather mug, is the tough guy, and Dolores Costello Barrymore is the reason for his side-slipping.

Raft's trio of henchmen, James Gleason, Lynn Overman and Edgar Kennedy, hate to see their boss fall for the orphaned daughter of a wealthy banker, so they hire beautiful Ida Lupino to wreck the pending romance.

Raft has leased the old banker's mansion from Miss Barrymore and has turned it into a swank gambling house, with her help. When he gradually gives up his tough ways and begins to acquire a little polish, the romance starts to blossom which Ida is commissioned to break up.

Romance, high comedy and a bit of fast action combine to make "Yours for the Asking" entertainment of the finest sort, under Alexander Hall's direction.

Dauntless Bill Again

Bill Powell's gift to jest carelessly while staring into a gun muzzle and romance gayly under conditions that would fray nerves of steel gets a good play in "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," murder mystery which will show at the Roosevelt theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, November 8, 9 and 10.

Mystery centers on the apparently normal death of a jockey stricken while riding a favorite. Discovering that it is murder, Powell gets in some of his neatest and most thrilling work in setting a trap among seven suspects—one of whom has discovered a way to slay from afar, leaving only a dab of gelatin on the victim's body to show they did not expire naturally.

The film is lightened by romance between Powell and Jean Arthur, who appeared together in "The Greene Murder Case," and other Philo Vance pictures. Their ardent moments are hidden behind constant kidding and prank-playing of the kind acclaimed in "The Thin Man."

Eric Blore, the perfect "gentleman," turns in another of his priceless performances, and the cast also includes James Gleason, Ralph Morgan, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Lila Lee, Frankie Darro, Frank Thomas and Paul Fix.

Heart-Storms

The tragic, romantic career of one of history's most fascinating figures comes to the screen of the Roosevelt theater Wednesday and Thursday in "Mary of Scotland," with Katharine Hepburn playing the title role.

Opposite Miss Hepburn is Fredric March as the Earl of Bothwell, her steadfast protector whom she married. The part has the dash and gallant abandon reminiscent of his roles in "The Affairs of Cellini" and "The Royal Family," and March also has "that something" which made Mary think the world was well lost for love.

The picture recounts the most exciting period of Mary's career, when she returned from France as the young widow of a French king, to rule over her native land. She soon clashed with Elizabeth of England over the power to rule, and carried on an ill-starred romance with Bothwell.

The cast includes a host of well-known players, and the sets dun the gamut from a fog-bound Scottish village to the lavishness of the English court.

This story, touchingly and feelingly told, is one of the screen giants of the year which you will not want to miss.
