At The Roosevelt

The grand old man of the stage, Fred Stone, gets an ideal vehicle for his talents in "Grand Jury," coming to the Roosevelt theater in Bonneville Friday and Saturday, November 13 and 14.

Far off the pattern of films dealing with the gang problem, the picture is a condemnation of the average man's unwillingness to go out of his way to halt the march of crime.

An exciting chain of events is set in motion when a grand jury, whose members are little concerned with public welfare, fails to indict a member of a powerful criminal syndicate charged with murder. Stone portrays a public-minded citizen, furious at this miscarriage of justice, who tries to clinch the evidence against the killer. He riles the boss racketeer and comes near paying for his benefactions with his life.

Owen Davis Jr. and Louise Latimer, two recruits from Broadway who first scored in "Bunker Bean," are again linked in romantic roles. Moroni Olsen, Frank M. Thomas, Russell Hicks, Harry Jans, Guinn Williams and Harry Beresford are also cast.

Big-Mouthed Marvel

A funny man at his funniest can be pretty funny, you'll have to admit if you see Joe E. Brown, the "ya-a-a-y" man, in "Earthworm Tractors" at the Roosevelt theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, November 15, 16 and 17.

Probably no other comedian on this sphere could have come so close to personifying Alexander Botts, natural born super-salesman, whose luck is so phenomenal that even his consistent and colossal blunders turn out to his advantage.

William Hazlett Upson's stories in the Saturday Evening Post are used as a basis for the film.

The supporting cast is talented and versatile. Lovable, laughable old Guy Kibbee turns in a whale of a performance as the partly deaf old codger who is Joe's toughest and most desirable customer. June Travis and Carol Hughes, brunette newcomers to the screen, also show a flair for comedy.

Moon's Our Home," is the leading character in "Spendthrift," scheduled at the Roosevelt theater Wednesday and Thursday, November 18 and 19.

Fonda is a young millionaire gone broke in "Spendthrift." Owner of a string of polo and race horses, he is believed by his society neighbors to be worth at least $2,000,000. Actually he has nothing.

With the aid of his trainer and his trainer's daughter, Pat Paterson, he manages to stall off bill collectors until after the Kentucky derby, promising that his horse will win. His last cent goes toward reaching Kentucky—and then his horse fails.

Tough break follows tough break. He falls for a southern belle, Mary Brian, who turns out to be an artful gold digger, and she gets him up to his ears in debt. 'Tis only after the stables and fortune are gone that he finds Pat is the only girl who can make him happy.
