

First Hot-Air Balloon

The first hot-air balloon was made by Joseph Montgolfier, who reasoned that if hot air would go up a chimney it might push up a balloon. With a sheep, a duck and a roster on board, his paper balloon made its first ascension at Paris in 1783. A few months later two men, Pilatre de Rozier and the Marquis d'Arlandes, made a trip.

Discovery of hydrogen as a lifting gas made the hot-air balloon obsolete before it got a real trial.

Bob Davis Reveals

Greatest Adventurer Is Unaware of Right to Title.

NEVER in history has there been a lack of courageous men; at least, never a shortage of intrepid souls who were willing to break a lance with fate. Theirs are the sagas that survive the ages, to be told wherever men congregate to swap tales of danger and daring.

Years ago, New York boasted an Adventurer's club. Those who had come to grips with life and lived to tell the tale asked nothing more than a few listeners. When a man held the floor he had his say to the end and none took exception to the form or content of his narrative. One night the chairman, in this case Arthur Sullivan Hoffman, invited those present to relate dramatic chapters from their own experience.

Robert Ritchie, a visiting international journalist, called upon to contribute a yarn, had this to say: "Adventure is not necessarily based upon thrilling eventualities. What is adventure to one man may be deadly monotony to another. It resolves itself into a point of view. The greatest adventurer I ever knew was quite unaware of his right to claim such title, and yet, when one takes into consideration the details of his magnificent intrepidity, nothing, in my opinion, compares. His name was Hermann Bland; dead or alive today who knows. I met him on a steamer out of Liverpool, en route to India via the Mediterranean, through the Suez and down the Red sea. Small, wizened and retiring was this man, difficult of approach and, despite my persistent efforts at ice breaking, hard to crack. Not until the second week out did he evince the slightest inclination to fraternize. I had gone out of my way to break through the crust of his retreat. His surrender was complete. This was his story: Born in Hamburg of an English mother and German father, he came to England with his parents, shopkeepers, provisioners, I believe, and got a fairly good education, excelling in draftsmanship, which led to map making.

Fate Tricks Hermann Bland.

"At twenty-eight, Bland, orphaned, but reasonably prosperous, married a Welsh girl, who died without issue after twelve years of married life, leaving her husband a parcel of real estate in Cardiff. Twenty years of uneventful life for the map maker followed. Bland, now sixty, with a snug deposit in a savings bank, to which he added 5,800 pounds, by the sale of the Cardiff property, making 11,000 pounds for a grand total, resigned from the map making establishment and made preparations to see some of the world that he had been charting on paper for thirty-two years. Where to go? Why not leave it to chance? That would be an idea worth trying. Fate should decide for him, and in the dark. So, Hermann repaired to his sitting room, switched off the light and groped his way to the center table, upon which lay an atlas. Opening the book at random, he stuck a pin haphazard into the page under his hand. Light! Which way now? The gleaming pin stood upright in the vitals of a small lumber town in northern Michigan. Well, if that was destiny's plan, Herman Bland would let it ride.

"Within a fortnight, lugging two Gladstone bags and a Burberry duster, Hermann landed in the lumber town, took a room in a depot hotel, and for a period of one month, with never a complaint upon his lips, stayed on at this capital of vast inconvenience, sweltering heat and boredom.

"Three years elapsed before this tourist-minded man took another shot with a pin at the atlas. This time, again in the Stygian dark, he perforated the town of Irkutsk, Siberia, into which, with a trunk and a heavy ulster, he plunged by the shortest possible route. One week was enough.

Patience Rewards Traveler.
"And now, gentlemen of the Adventurers' club," said Ritchie, glancing at Hoffman and steadying his voice, "I have brought you to Hermann Bland's third trip out of London in search of the great adventure, which he alone possessed the vision to perceive. 'My friend,' said he to me as we emerged from the Red sea, 'I have given you the truth concerning my travels to Michigan, and my trip to Siberia, the memory of which kept me in England for five years before I decided to resume my travels. This time, still in the darkness, I used a map of the world, turning my face toward the east. Long did I delay, fearing lest destiny desert me for the third time. Finally, with high hopes that the hour had come for me to plant the point, I did so with a firm hand, and then, confidence restored, with faith at high pitch, I turned on the light. Behold! here in India, my pin, on a blue field stood like a sentinel in the very heart of the Vale of Kashmir.'"
