

4-H Members Make Plans For Contest

Hopeful of winning the trip to the Pacific International Livestock Exposition this fall sponsored by The First National Bank of Portland, 4-H Club members in Hood River County are completing special projects and preparing entries for county and 4-H fair competition. Choice of a boy and girl from every county in Oregon will be based on outstanding leadership and achievement in club work.

Success of the 1936 contest arranged by The First National Bank through its own branch units and county agents brought widening of the affair's scope to include all of Oregon this year, according to Walter H. Brown, assistant vice-president of the bank, in charge of the Pacific International visit. H. C. Seymour, Oregon 4-H Club director, has again been appointed general chairman of the judging and awards.

Judges will be County Agent Arch Marble, County Superintendent of Schools L. B. Gibson, and E. O. Blanchar, First National Bank branch manager in Hood River. In counties not served by the Portland bank's branch system, other local banks will cooperate in selecting a third member of the judging committee.

The three-day visit in Portland during the October livestock exposition will include daily trips to the show grounds and entertainment by the host bank, which will pay transportation and all other expenses of the 4-H Club members.

Storage Methods Told By E. H. Wiegand

Freezing affords one of the simplest methods of preserving foods, and is rapidly becoming one of the most popular with the establishment of storage locker facilities in more and more communities, says E. H. Wiegand, head of the foods products industries division at Oregon State College.

Professor Wiegand, who has done considerable work on frozen storage problems, points out that its use provides products closely approximating the fresh, and makes them available the year around. To obtain good results, however, it is necessary to follow closely and accurately the directions for preparing the different types of produce for frozen storage.

Wiegand is the author of a recent experiment station circular on this subject, from which a mimeographed extract has now been made to provide the directions in a more convenient form. Both are available free upon request.

Blanching, a process of partially cooking and softening before freezing, is essential to obtain high quality in frozen vegetables, Wiegand says. For storage containers, tin cans in sizes from No. 2 to No. 10 meet all requirements, he says. Glass jars and paraffined paper cups are also suitable, as are parchment or cellophane-lined waxed boxes where products are not to be packed in liquid. Sugar or salt solutions are used for some products, while others, such as berries and sour cherries, may be packed in dry sugar.

Among the products for which freezing directions are given in the new mimeographed extract are berries, cherries, stone fruits, beans, asparagus, lima beans, broccoli, sweet corn, peas, spinach and cauliflower.

GROWTH OF SEED INDUSTRY IN OREGON REVEALED

The growing of seed crops is rapidly becoming an important and profitable phase of Oregon agriculture, with the income from this source bringing a total of $3,000,000 to Oregon in 1936.

Facts recently compiled by E. R. Jackman, extension specialist in farm crops at O. S. C., for use in a program service series compiled by J. R. Beck, extension specialist, shows for instance, that Oregon produces 100 per cent of the common and Hungarian vetch seed, 100 per cent of the chewings fescue seed, and 100 per cent of the English and Italian rye grass seed used in the United States, as well as 95 per cent of the nation's bent grass seed, 95 per cent of the hairy vetch, 90 per cent of the Austrian winter peas and 90 per cent of the ladino clover seed.

Josephine County leads in ladino seed production, he says. Linn in English rye grass, Gilliam in crested wheat grass, Malheur in irrigated clovers, central Oregon in alsike clover, and Willamette Valley counties in hairy vetch, crimson clover and vegetable seeds. A total of 100,000 acres were devoted to seed crops in Oregon last year.
