CIVIC SHOWMANSHIP

A most interesting development of recent years has been the growth of summer festivals, celebrations, round-ups, or what have you, in cities and towns of the Pacific northwest and, in fact, the whole country. The Portland Rose Festival and the Pendleton Round-up at one time had the Oregon field pretty much to themselves in the way of civic festivities, but today they are competing for attention with a hundred other communities.

There is the Astoria Regatta, Wenatchee's Apple Festival, Lebanon's Strawberry Festival, Goldendale's Jamboree, the Old Fort Dalles Frolics, and Mt. Angel's Flax Festival. There are Pioneer Day celebrations at Eugene, Centralia, and Yakima. And there are rodeos at Oregon City, Molalla, Klamath Falls, Caldwell, and Lewiston, as well as a round-up of red heads at Taft. That is naming just a few.

These civic frolics benefit a lot of people—farmers, for example, who have their leading product glorified in a festival dedicated to it. Merchants enjoy a rushing business. Unemployed persons get work for a few days. Queens and princesses delight in the regal homage paid them. Chambers of Commerce see their cities' names displayed the countryside over. And every one, presumably, has a good time.

In past days, the county fair has been the principal get-together in most communities, but the prestige and popularity of that old-fashioned event, beloved by our fathers, is gradually waning before the more spectacular civic celebration. If the present trend continues, the county fair will likely become a smaller and more purely agricultural show.

Hood River's own civic party is, of course, the annual Mt. Hood climb. Although sponsored by the American Legion, it is aided and supported by the whole Valley. Paying tribute to a mountain that is the most glorious sight in Oregon and emphasizing the pleasure and benefit to be derived from recreation in the great outdoors, we are fortunate to be presenting an event so unique in type, and so uncommercial in design.

Household Hints

Stitch two old and thin towels together to make one good one.

Ordinary string may be used to crochet wash cloths.

To keep thread from kinking, always knot the end first leaving the spool.

When stitching heavy material, like canvas or duck, rub soap along the places to be stitched and it will not be so hard on the machine.

Metal teapots, if seldom used, should have a lump of sugar in them to eliminate the musty odor.

A delicious whipped cream substitute is easily made by adding a sliced banana to the white of one egg and beating until stiff. The banana will completely dissolve.

Rubbing the skin once or twice a day with ripe tomato clears the complexion.

Bacon will not shrink so much if dipped in cornmeal or flour before frying.

When making baking powder biscuits you will find their flavor improved by the addition of a teaspoonful of sugar.

About all the relief a home gardener can expect is a back plaster.

Oregon Motorists' Pledge Sticker

Civic Groups Join In Safety Pledge

Civic and service clubs, business organizations and private individuals in all sections of the state this week hastened to accept the Oregon motorist's pledge—the white cross vow to drive safely, sponsored as a part of Oregon's "Let's Quit Killing" traffic safety program.

The motorist's pledge, contained on a small red, white and blue sticker, is offered by the Oregon State Motor Association to every person who drives a car in Oregon as a preventive against death, injury and property damage currently incurred by automobiles. These stickers can be obtained at the Sun office.

By formally signing and "wearing" the pledge, motor club safety leaders believe, the average motorist will be impelled to drive more carefully. Thus he will ultimately assist in slashing Oregon's record traffic death toll, for, statistics show, the man behind the wheel of a car is personally responsible for three out of five of all casualties—and traffic mishaps kill more than all other causes of death.

Heads of civic clubs and industrial firms will be supplied with stickers for every member or employe upon request.

Officially endorsed by Earl Snell, secretary of state, and Mayor Joseph K. Carson Jr., of Portland, and approved by virtually every agency in the state, the motorist's pledge is designed to help drive death from the highway.

Silo Silas Sez--

The difference between a poor man and a millionaire is that one worries over his next meal, and the other over his last.

There'll always be more or less trouble in this country until the Department of Agriculture learns to cross a dust-bowl story with a valley flood.

Much displeasure is evidenced by the new schedule which limits greatly transportation and freight service between Hood River and the Washington shore. It is hoped that the new arrangement is only temporary.
