At The Roosevelt

Wednesday and Thursday

The fanaticism and intolerance of certain dwellers in remote hill-countrys of the United States are revealed in "Mountain Justice," the First National melo-drama which will be the feature attraction at the Roosevelt Theatre, playing Wednesday and Thursday.

This thrilling picture, which is not alone a dramatic sociological document, but a tender romance, co-stars Josephine Hutchinson and George Brent, and was directed by that acknowledged master of realism, Michael Curtiz.

Miss Hutchinson portrays Ruth Harkins, a young mountaineer girl who has a taste of life and education in the "outside," and returns to her hamlet eager to bring health and education to at least the children of the backwoods. Her one sympathizer and aide in this is Guy Kibbee, a genial old physician.

Her worst enemy and opponent is her own father, played by Robert Barrat, a bitter fanatic who hates everything taught by "furriners."

He doesn't hesitate to enforce his hold upon his two daughters—little Marcia Mae Jones is the younger one—by lashings with a bullwhip.

Things come to such a pass that the elder daughter, Miss Hutchinson, in a fight for her own life, is obliged to kill her father. George Brent, a brilliant young attorney, who has met her in New York, learns to love her, comes to her rescue and defends her at her trial for murder.

But there is not even justice in this ignorant region, and she is removed from the prison and flown to another State, whose Governor refuses to grant extradition papers, so she remains free.

"Mountain Justice" is a severe indictment of the backwardness of certain parts of the civilized United States. Others in the cast, besides those named, include Mona Barrie, Margaret Hamilton, Robert McWade, Fuzzy Knight, Edward Pawley, Elizabeth Risdon, Granville Bates, Russell Simpson, Sybil Harris and Guy Wilkerson.

Friday and Saturday

Treating its basic theme of the fake stock racket from a light-hearted angle, RKO Rodio has evolved a delightful and hilarious comedy in its "Don't Tell the Wife," which shows Friday and Saturday at the Roosevelt Theatre.

Guy Kibbee, Una Merkel and Lynne Overman, three of the most accomplished mirth-makers of the screen as well as three of its most capable players, take the leading roles in brilliant fashion, and with the aid of a cleverly-contrived scenario, excellently natural dialog, and a first-rate supporting cast succeed in making the film a grand piece of entertainment.

The plot hinges on the activities of a group of stock-selling swindlers with Overman at their head. To obtain the requisite capital for their scheme they have to get the consent of Overman's wife, Miss Merkel, and she, suspicious of their honesty, makes things difficult.

To reassure her, they persuade Kibbee, a guileless old newspaperman, to accept the presidency of their company, and they start their campaign in fine style with a "boiler room" full of suave telephone salesmen peddling gold mining stock right and left. But Kibbee, unaware of their real purposes, manages to get the firm into hot water with the postal authorities, and the complications that ensue make the picture one continuous roar of laughter.
