BONNEVILLE SCHOOL NEWS

The third and fourth grades made an educational excursion to Hood River on Thursday of last week. James Faubian of the sixth grade went along to report back to his room on the trip.

Leaving the school house on the bus at 9:10 A. M., they drove to Hood River, enjoying the scenery along the way, especially the Sleeping Indian of Wind Mountain. On arrival at Hood River, the bus drove around the ruined apple house for a lesson on the destructiveness of fire; thence to the new Post Office. Mr. McLucas, the postmaster, made them welcome, and took them into the back room where they watched the cancelling machine and some bought commemorative stamps for their collections.

After thanking Mr. McLucas, they went to the office of the Bonneville Dam Chronicle, where Mr. Buchanan very kindly and patiently demonstrated the printing of the paper. They saw the linotype machine in action, and each received a block with his name on it. The press was very interesting as were the paper cutter and the trays of type and the "pi."

Next to the First National Bank. There the manager, Mr. Blanchard, received them courteously and took them behind the counters to see the machines, the money and the vaults.

By this time everybody was hungry, so they returned to the waiting bus which drove to a good parking place for lunch. But before they could eat, they must needs visit the grocery store for candy and cookies.

After lunch the bookstore was visited, where several who wished to add to their stamp collections made purchases.

Next, to the Public Library. Mrs. Wait, the librarian, received them graciously, showed them the library upstairs and down, and explained about the books and how to borrow them.

Time to go now, and after an hour's ride back to Bonneville, the children voted it the end of a perfect day.

George Chaney entered the Third grade on Monday, coming from Ockley Green School in Portland.

Kathleen Donaldson has donated some sea articles to the museum.
