Oregon's First Steamer Built In Year 1835

The first steamer to operate on Oregon Territory waters was the Beaver, built in 1835 in England, and owned by William Armitt, secretary to the Hudson's Bay Company. This was brought out in a dispatch released yesterday by the Information Service of The Federal Writer's and Historical Record Survey Projects of the Works Progress Administration. The first steamer to be built in Oregon, the Columbia, a clumsy double-ended resembling a ferry boat, made her maiden trip on July 4, 1850, up the Willamette from Astoria, where she was built. It required twenty-six hours for the run from Astoria to Oregon City. Due to the crowd, one passenger, after having paid two ounces of gold dust for passage from Astoria to Portland, was forced to sleep on the upper deck. The fare was $25 a head or a ton.

After the steamer, Lot Whitcomb, which was launched on Christmas Day in the same year, began its regular run the following spring, rates were reduced. The machinery used in the Lot Whitcomb was of French make, shipped from New Orleans, and assembled by Jacob Kamm at a salary of $400 a month. He became engineer of the steamer and J. C. Ainsworth, captain, at $300 a month. Both men were later identified with Oregon's famous transportation monopoly, the Oregon Steam Navigation Company.

The first big excursion from the pioneer towns of Oregon City, Milwaukie and Portland was made by the Lot Whitcomb to the Cascades on May 30, returning the next day. Passage was "$25 for a gentleman and lady."

Canby Corps Honors

General Grant

Canby Women's Relief Corps of Hood River met last Saturday, honoring General Grant's birthday with a program. Tap dancing was given by Dorothy Lingren and Duane Duff, Mrs. Viola Krieg accompanist. Two violin selections were afforded by Mrs. Ruth Billings, Mrs. Oxborrow accompanist. Yuka Yasui sang a native song, "Cherry Blossom Time" accompanied by her sister Michi Yasui. Dorothy Lingren gave a military toe solo dance and Yuka Yasui a station toe solo dance.

Henry Harve mentioned many instances where General Grant won fame as a Commander during the years of 1861 and 1862. Mrs. Max Mime read a letter from Joe D. Thomson of The Dalles telling of General Grant's visit at The Dalles in 1850 and 1854 and again in 1883, when called from Fort Vancouver on Court Duty.

One new Corps member was initiated at the meeting. Mrs. Tom Johnson invited the Corps to have a Tea at her home Tuesday.

School News

BONNEVILLE SCHOOL

The third and fourth grades have been busy writing letters of thanks to the people who were nice to them when they visited various industries in Hood River last week.

Patricia Laxton was absent two days, having been to Oregon City with her parents.

The children have been following with keen interest the fortunes of the "Children of the Covered Wagon" as their teacher read that delightful book to them. Pioneering is now more real to the third and fourth grades.

Mr. Robertson represented the Principals' Association of Multnomah County at the Inland Empire meeting of teachers at Tacoma, Washington, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday of last week. He will also be the main speaker for the Multnomah County Teacher's meeting Tuesday night, when he will report upon the Tacoma meeting.

Many students from the Bonneville School are going to the Music Festival at Benson next Friday. The school is taking the school bus. The boys' and girls' glee will sing, the orchestra will play, the Primary, Intermediate, and Junior choruses will sing, and the harmonica band will play. All students are working hard for this annual meeting of schools of Multnomah County.

CHARLES A. SPRAGUE

Charles A. Sprague, Republican Candidate for the office of governor of the state of Oregon, was a Hood River visitor yesterday morning for a short time, renewing old acquaintances and making new ones. He was on his way to eastern Oregon for a series of conferences and public meetings. He was accompanied by R. S. Johnson of the Young Republican organization.

Sprague is editor of the Oregon Statesman, Salem daily newspaper.

Power District Subject of Vocal Combat

For six hours the Oregon State Hydroelectric Commission sat in session in the rooms over the First National Bank and listened to the pro and con of a proposed Public Utility District in Hood River County.

Proponents of the district presented several complete papers with charts and graphs to show the advisability of such a move. The hearing was very well attended and many points were brought out both for and against the proposal.

D. L. Pierson and C. A. Reed spoke in behalf of those who were not in favor of such a move. All other private individuals who spoke were in favor of a Public Utility District if it could be worked out to the advantage of the user.

The Pacific Power and Light Company was represented by officers from Portland and Elensburg in addition to their local staff.

First Flatboats Propelled by Indian Crew

Flatboats manned by an Indian crew were used for freight and passenger service in Oregon until after 1850.

During the 60's and 70's when river transportation was at its height on the Willamette river an experiment was tried in which oxen on a treadmill powered the boat. It worked well enough downstream but the oxen could not furnish motive power enough to return the craft.

It is recorded that the river boat captains had to pay the Indians in cash, because they considered valueless the gold dust offered them.

One of the first captains operating flatboats on the Willamette and Yamhill rivers had a long tin horn which was blown by a leather-lunged member of the crew to announce arrivals.

Archery Range Built At Country Club

Archery, that fast-growing sport of the men of yore, was this past week given added stimulus with the announcement of McCarty and Thompson of the Hood River Country Club that in conjunction with Robert P. Loomis, of the Loomis House of Music, an archery range had been constructed near the club house and a special membership rate had been set for those just interested in archery.

Mr. Loomis will be on hand at the range every Tuesday for the purpose of giving free instruction to those interested. Equipment may be rented at the club house for the sum of 25 cents per hour. In September the trophies on display in the Music House will be placed as awards in competition.

MR. ROSS SAID:

"At the low rate to be set for Bonneville power public utility districts can afford to pay a reasonable amount of taxes. We don't want any evading of proper taxes. But we want rates as low as possible. That is why I am trying to determine what is a fair tax for people's utility districts to pay." This is from a speech made in St. Helens recently, and published in the Oregon Grange Bulletin.

Used crankcase oil has so many uses on the farm that it is a great waste to discard it. Profitable use is to apply it to the floors of poultry houses; it dries quickly, reduces dust, hardens the floor, and saves much cleaning. If it is poured on wagon wheels and other wooden wheels, it diminishes the likelihood of their drying out and shrinking.
