Odd Shots

By H. A. S.

Don't groan too soon, folks. Old Odd Shots hasn't returned permanently. In fact, this particular sample was submitted by mail to preclude any possibility of physical unpleasantness.

The political season is back with us, and the herds of candidates are undergoing the usual tests for communism, economic royalism, botulism and Bangs' disease.

Our idea of superfluity—a designer of women's hats in an insane asylum.

We can't blame men for laughing at their wives' chapeaux. We know they'll cry when they get the bills.

I thought my wife liked our new maid until the little woman shot at us through the keyhole.

So we all went out to the penitentiary, and a good term was had by all.

The people "oh'd" and "ah'd" when our president took office, but now they just "owe."

Then there was the reckless driver who was always putting another notch in his fan-belt.

Here lies the bones of Rufus Jones
In life so realistic;
His car went "whiz,"
And now he is
An accident statistic.

We'll bet there aren't many old-fashioned girls left in Spain—the gentle kind, who still like to watch bull-fights and sabre duels.

We'd wish all you fishermen luck, if we hadn't been called a sucker so often.

Ha ha ha. End of joke. End of joke book.
