

Scouts First To Climb Mt. Defiance

Twenty-two Boy Scouts, under the leadership of Fred Coe, veteran Scout leader of Hood River, made a record for themselves Sunday when they climbed to the top of Mount Defiance—the first climbers to register there in 1933. A group of 35 Mazama hikers from Portland had tried to scale this peak (the highest timber-covered peak in the world) three weeks ago, but were forced to return because of too much snow on the trails. The Scouts report that the snow is now mostly gone, though there were small patches at the base of the look-out tower on the summit. The hikers ascended the mountain from the east side, and hiked down Lindsay Creek Trail to the Columbia River Highway.

Rising Columbia Halts Industrial Street Paving

The rising Columbia, along with the far-reaching complications which its higher water has brought about, even halted the paving of Industrial Street Monday. Use of river sand in the building of the roadway had been planned by the Oregon Contracting Company, successful bidders on the Hood River street and rising water covered up their supply. Samples of substitute sands submitted to City Engineer C. M. Hurlburt and Mayor A. S. Kolstad were rejected Monday, and the surfacing operations were temporarily halted. However, satisfactory materials were secured later and yesterday the work was again under way.

Dealer of Phoenix Hosiery

A typographical error in last week's Chronicle stated that Phoenix Hose was being handled by a merchant other than the Phoenix authorized dealer, Parkins, Inc.

Parkins, Hood River's popular apparel store, is, has been, and probably always will be the authorized dealer in this section of the Columbia Gorge for Phoenix Hose.

The error was on the part of the Chronicle.
