Bonneville Power Line Under Way

Line construction for the Bonneville Project's $14,000,000 transmission network which will bring Columbia River power to the Northwest was started off Monday with the good wishes of two governors.

At Ampere, power substation site near Vancouver, Wash., Acting Bonneville Administrator Charles E. Carey and Vancouver's Mayor A. N. Stanley superintended the operation of a power shovel which excavated for the foundation of the first steel tower in the 220,000 volt line from Bonneville dam.

Fritz Ziebarth, contractor who is building the line, and M. A. Pit-houd, Ziebarth's general superintendent, took part in the ceremonies. Onlookers included Chauncey Price and L. M. Jones, commissioners of the Skamania and Clark county public utility districts, and a group of engineers and newspapermen from Portland and Vancouver.

Governors Send Greetings

Governors Charles A. Sprague of Oregon and Clarence D. Martin of Washington wired greetings to the staff of the power administrator on the start of the work.

"Hearty congratulations on the starting of construction," Governor Sprague's telegram stated. "The Northwest has looked forward eagerly to the utilization of the energy of the mighty Columbia. We want this energy to flow to industries, stores, homes and farms of the tributary territory so that the whole area will enjoy the benefits of Bonneville at the lowest possible rate."

Governor Martin's telegram: "Congratulations to you and your co-workers as the first shovel of earth is turned in the erection of the transmission system that will make available the fruits of the Bonneville Project to the good citizens of this entire area."

Power By Fall

The "backbone line" from the dam—first unit of the project to be constructed—will be ready to receive energy by September. Shortly thereafter, the line from Vancouver to Eugene will be completed and power will be available for Willamette Valley communities. Bids were opened last week on the Eugene line, second in order of construction, and the contract will be awarded within a few days.

Rapid progress also is being made on other lines in the network, Carey reports. The 220,000 volt twin circuit between Bonneville and Coulee dams, longest in the system, is awaiting completion of final surveys and title clearance and appraisal of land along the proposed right-of-way.

Similar details must be completed before construction will start on the three other lines of the network. Bonneville staff members are busy with surveys and land appraisals on the line to Hood River and on the lines from Vancouver to Raymond and Aberdeen.

Pacific Line Purchased

Construction of the Raymond line will be speeded through the purchase last week of a portion of the high tension system of the Willapa

Electric Co. which operates in Pacific County. As a result of this first sale contract between the project and a private utility, the purchased line will be "stepped up" to a higher voltage and incorporated in the Bonneville network.

Principal contracts awarded for materials to be used in construction of the network had reached a total of more than $3,000,000 by March 1. Disbursements for right-of-way, labor contracts and thousands of dollars worth of small items have brought total Bonneville expenditures above $5,000,000 thus far.

Work of land clearing, prior to construction, this week was providing jobs for 1029 persons on WPA rolls. Surveys and specification work have swelled the project's engineering staff to 550. When the entire project staff is included, the number of jobs provided runs close to the 2000 mark; and this is exclusive of the labor hired by contractors.

Final Rites Set For Ross Monday

The body of J. D. Ross, Bonneville administrator, who died at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn., Tuesday, will lie in state with a guard of honor in the First Presbyterian church at Seattle from 10 a. m. until 2 p. m. Monday, when final services will be held.

Officials and workers of the Bonneville project, Seattle city light and Grange and labor organizations will gather in Seattle for the funeral.

The Bonneville project announced that active pallbearers will be Charles E. Carey, William J. McKean, Glen Smith, Robert K. Beck, J. R. Peters and Edward Kemoe.

Honorary pallbearers will be Mayor Arthur B. Langlie of Seattle, Bonneville Counsel John C. Fischer and several Seattle city officials.

The guard of honor will include Ray W. Gill and Ervin M. King, masters of the Oregon and Washington state Granges, respectively; Sherwood Jones, Stephen S. Kahn, Logan C. Stewart, R. M. Nance,

FIVE YEARS LATER

He was old enough to know better. Here's the story: He bought a piece of real estate and accepted an abstract of title which was not made by an abstract company maintaining a complete set of abstract books.

Five years later, after building a very fine home on the premises, he attempted to sell his property. The prospective purchaser would not accept for his attorney's examination an abstract made by a company which did not possess a complete set of abstract books. A new abstract was ordered and the true and complete record of the chain of title, proved to be unmerchantable. In order to give a good title, the owner was forced to bring a suit to quiet title, and when he paid the bill he remembered the old adage about experience being an expensive teacher.

Safeguard your investments in real estate. Insist that the abstract of title upon which you and your attorney depends, for information concerning the chain of title, is made by a company with a complete set of tract indexes.

GRAND JURY TO CONVENE

The adjourned session of the Hood River County grand jury, which will deliberate on the county's rock crusher purchase, and announced in this paper last week as scheduled for March 20, will be held on March 28, District Attorney John Baker announces. A special prosecutor will be appointed by the attorney-general to hear the case.
