SIMPLY "THE PRESIDENT."

How to Address the Chief Magistrate of the United States.

It was not at all strange that, after their sad experience under monarchical rule, that early Americans should have disliked every thing that savored of royalty. This spirit found expression in the Constitution itself. It was distinctly provided that "No title of nobility shall be granted by the United States." The question was raised as to what "titles it will be proper to annex to the offices of President and Vice-President of the United States; if any other than those given in the Constitution?" and this matter was deemed of sufficient importance to receive the attention of a special joint committee of both houses. This committee reported that the President should be addressed as "His Excellency." The Senators would not agree to the report. A committee of conference was then appointed, and reported "that, in the opinion of the committee, it will be proper to thus address the President: 'His Highness, the President of the United States of America, and Protector of their Liberties.'" The members of the House would consent to nothing of the kind. The result of the whole matter is shown in the resolution passed by the Senate on the 14th of May, 1789, which held:

It would be proper to annex a respectable title to the office of President of the United States; but the Senate, desirous of preserving harmony with the House of Representatives, where the practice lately observed in presenting an address to the President was without the addition of titles, think it proper, for the present, to act in conformity with the practice of the House; therefore

Resolved, That the present address be: "To the President of the United States," without addition of title.

That resolution has never been disturbed, and there is no legislative authority for any other address than the one so adopted. High-sounding titles are hardly in good taste in a republic. —St. Nicholas.

There is an English precedent for the Paris physician who secured a part of the skin of Franzini, the executed murderer, and had it made into two card cases. In the Scotland Yard "Chamber of Commerce" is a portion of the skin of one Bellingham, who murdered Mr. Perceval, annexed into leather. It originally belonged to the surgeon who dissected the remains of Bellingham after the execution.

People will tell you that this is a selfish world; and yet there are plenty of folks who are willing to do your thinking for you; and thinking, every one knows who has tried it, is the hardest possible kind of labor.

HOW THEY FALL BEHIND.

There is really no profit in recommending the worthless, for the reaction in the minds of those who buy and are deceived is pointedly against everything sold by such a dealer. Hence, the force of the following voluntary letter, which is based upon the conscientious conviction formed from the long and cautious experience of a leading drug house of Boston, represents in every line a most important and valued revelation: "Boston, July 11, 1887.—The Charles A. Vogeler Co.—Gentlemen: Many preparations are placed before the public, and for a time at least they have a large but temporary sale—large, because of the extensive advertising; temporary, as the suffering class soon realize that the compound possesses but little merit. Not so with St. Jacobs Oil. Its success has been constant from the start, and to-day we regard it as one of those standard remedies that our trade consider as absolutely essential to always carry in their stock. Personal experience and the good words of the druggists of New England all tend to prove that each year will add to its sale and well deserved popularity. Signed, Doolittle & Smith." Taking the many cases of cure, published by the proprietors, examples are given of its unvarying effects in the worst chronic cases, and there is nothing in trade which can approach its efficacy.
