

WEST SIDE TELEPHONE.

McMINNVILLE, TUESDAY, SEPT. 7, 1886.

The work of the forty-ninth congress may be summarized as follows: The total number of measures that passed both houses was 1,101, being 241 senate bills and 860 bills which originated in the house; 1,095 of these were received by the president, and of that number 814 were approved, 157 became laws without the president's signature, 115 were vetoed, and 9 failed for want of signature at the time of adjournment, ten days not having expired since they reached the president. Of the new laws, 746 were house measures and 241 senate measures. The laws that became such by limitation were, with two exceptions, private pension and relief bills. Of the measures vetoed by the president, 26 were senate and 77 house bills. Twenty-eight of the senate bill vetoed were private pension bills, three were for the erection of public building. Of the 77 house bills disapproved by the president 74 were private pension bills, and three were for the erection of public buildings. The number of measures vetoed during the session was four more than have been vetoed from the foundation of the government to the beginning of the session just closed. Only one bill was passed by the two houses over the veto. The principal appropriation bills passed were as follows:

Judge David Martin, of the second judicial district of Kansas decided recently a case of importance under the prohibitory law of that state. Assistant Attorney-General Tuffe commenced proceedings to enjoin Zeibold & Hagelin, brewers, of Atchison, from manufacturing and selling beer in the state of Kansas for purposes not allowed by law. Application was made for a transfer of the case to the United States Circuit court, on the ground that the prohibitory liquor law is in violation of the constitution of the United States. Judge Martin refused the transfer on the ground that the supreme court of the United States had already decided the point at issue, and that there was no Federal question involved requiring the further adjudication of the Federal courts. Judge Martin's decision is in opposition to that of Judge Brewer, of the United States Circuit court, on the Waif case, and of Judge Love, of Iowa. The power of the state to make and enforce its own police regulations is asserted, and the doctrine that a state is under obligations to pay for breweries and saloons injuriously affected by the operation of the law is controverted.

The following seems to be the most reasonable crop estimate of the production for 1886 of the great cereal and other staples of the United States: Wheat, 425,000,000 bushels, oats 500,000,000, rye 30,000,000, barley 60,000,000 bushels, cotton 6,500,050 bales, tobacco 550,000,000 pounds, and sugar 250,000 hogsheads. There is no promise, in the case of any of the above, of either an extraordinarily heavy or a very light yield. Probably all are what might be termed good averages for a fair crop year. They represent plenty, without much surplus. This probably means better prices in each case than a heavy surplus, for there is much less foreign demand than in former years for our surplus products. The problem for the farmers and planters of the United States has taken this shape: to keep the production of agricultural staples within medium bounds, or have prices go so low that there is no adequate return to the producer.

What Yamhill county needs is manufacturing. She has an abundance of water power, which, if properly used, would run machinery that would give employment to 10,000 people; she is capable of producing her own wool and other articles to be manufactured, and all that is required is somebody with capital, push and vim, who is not afraid to take his chances among a thrifty and energetic people.

Jack Powers has been pardoned. It will be remembered that on the evening of July 5, 1881, in Portland he shot and killed his father-in-law, Ben Cornelius. He was tried and condemned to death, but being granted a new trial the verdict was changed and he was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. After five years confinement he is released. Pow at this time kept a saloon at St. Joe in this county.

The Oregon State Fair begins next Monday, and great preparations are being made for it. The pavilion and stock exhibits will surpass any preceding fair.

Charleston was shaken up again several times the latter part of the week by earthquakes.

THE DISTRESSED CITY.

A Charleston dispatch of the 4th says: Last night's shock has served to greatly impair confidence. Nearly all the people slept or remained out doors last night. The great dread now is the approach of the equinoctial gales, which have always been disastrous in Charleston. In fact, last year's disasters were so great as to attract national attention. It is estimated that every house in the city has had its foundation shattered by the earthquake. Walls have been rent, chimneys and steeples are off their square and there is nothing sound about the city. If an equinoctial gale of usual severity should strike the city before considerable repairs can be made, nearly every house in the city would be blown down. This gale comes sometimes as late as the first week in September, but last year it came in the last week in August. Thus it will be seen that the city is in imminent danger. At this moment a gale would cause such a crashing of timber, brick and mortar as was never before heard of. The temperature has changed so as to warn people that a storm is at hand. The effect of a week's storm and rain upon the homeless women and children would be appalling. Six ladies are reported to be dying from the effects of fright. The effort made yesterday to clear away debris has been abandoned and the people are settling back into the melancholy of yesterday. Two aldermen of each ward, with three citizens, have been appointed to condemn unsafe buildings. Berkely, chairman of the committee, has entered upon his duties. He knows not what to do, where to begin or where to stop. He freely declared that if fire had swept the city it would have been far preferable, for in that case insurance would have helped to repair waste places. Fatalities, so far as they have been ascertained, number fifty-eight. This number will be increased, for out of 200 injured there are some cases of a gravity that will probably result in death. The city still stands, but from south of the Battery the walk is lined with the dismantled residences of the wealthiest people, clear across to Cooper river. One goes from street to street, and from house, to find that not one is uninjured, while many of those that stand, after defying the energy of the earthquake, threaten to fall. Many of them, and it is not extravagant to say a quarter of the number, will have to be taken down. There are about 12,000 or 14,000 buildings in the city. To replace a quarter of this number will cost $4,000,000 or $5,000,000, according to estimates of moderate persons.

The W. C. T. U. convention at Corvallis last week was largely attended and the proceedings were interesting. The number of members of the W. C. T. U. in the state is reported as 722; amount of funds paid into the treasury this year, $2304.91.

Native Missourians.

The president stated that Fill Benton wanted to join. Flim Jetcher wanted an initiatory ceremony prepared, so that the reception of members could be made more impressive. Anteny thought there was to match initiatory ceremony now in the world and to little fraternity.

Philander proposed to read a reminiscence of old times in Pike, upon the introduction of members.

The president stated that another word like that and the offender would walk out of the hall without his hat. For no native ever used that word besides it was used as a title for all the state lies published in the newspapers. If Fill Benton could say "cow" and not "keow" he could come in and take his seat. Woc Dott and Bin Jewley were sent out as a committee to examine him.

Cool Capper wanted to know if the size of a man's feet hadn't ought to be set down as a qualification.

Anteny objected because he had seen suckers and buckeyes with feet as big as a sugar trough.

Fill Benton come in and asked leave to sign the constitution and by-laws so that he might be a full member.

He was informed by the chair that no member was allowed to be full without the crowd all having a show, and the only sign allowed was the sign of distress that a native always gave when he met a dude that was protected by law the same as any other man.

Soc Dutton thought the laws of man would not apply to the dude and appealed to Fill Benton the lawyer to prove it.

Fill said as the laws of man did not apply to the dude, that the law for the prevention of cruelty to animals would.

Anteny thought it was a slam on the animal kingdom to class the dude as an animal, especially a puke dude. Then he looked knowingly at Philander.

Philander jumped up demanded an explanation and said his "address was Columbus, S. C., so to speak."

The president brought down his hickory cane across the table and Bandy Akers bench-legged fiste run out from under it and was going to sample Philanders calf, but at the word "order" he and Philander both settled down and it puzzled Anteny to know which was the most obedient Philander or the fiste.

Shute Lobe was granted a traveling card and Flim Jetcher sang "Natchez Under the Hill."

The meeting then adjourned to see Bandy Akers fiste whip Soc Duttons old honner, but it couldn't make the rifle.

A MEMBER. Blackburn & Peckham, the agents of Chas. H. Dodd & Co., are doing the boss machine business of the county, sold some 25 twine binders and two steam thrashers.
