A very large majority of the Brazilian girls could not tell who is the Emperor of Germany, or that President Garfield and the Czar of Russia were assas s nated; the Soudan or General Gordon are riddles to their minds. They are even gnorant of some of the most important historical facts relading to their own land, and of a thousand and one other topics that the women of America and other countries are generally conversant with. They embroider, cro-chet and study music, but usually lack the patience and application necessary to excel in the latter. If they want a drink of water, or their shoes changed, they call a slave to do it. Many can sew and do their own dressmaking, being very convenient with the needle. their natural antipathy to work being overcome by their love of dress. Their conversation is utterly frivolous, and when with familiars they talk very loud, and in the most animated manner, gesticulating and beating the air with their hands and arms, all talking at once, with seldom any thing worth say-

If the Brazilian girl does not marry at the age she ought to be playing with her dolls, she frequently continues to play with her dolls until she does not marry. The writer remembers seeing a young woman apparently about eighteen years of age, in a street ear, in the city of Bahia, with a doll in her lap, which she cared for and handled the same as a girl would do, and it is no unusual thing for young married women to own and play with these and similar fixtures of the nursery. One young woman named Marie, had five or six One young dolls, upon whose garments she spent much of her time. When she married she insisted upon taking them to her new home, but when this home became invaded by less tractable babies, she was finally obliged to bury her inanimate, quondam friends, with all their in a trunk, probably to be resurr-cted by other little Maries, when they will aga'n be nursed and made confidants of. - Brooklyn Magazine.

A LAND OF LIARS.

How the Persians of To-day Evade All

After speaking of their parental and filial affection, their respect for the aged and their politeness and hospitality, a writer on Persia winds up apropos of the people of the country with the following phrase: "But as a race they are very untruthful and procrastinating." About these two traits of the Persian character I'd like to say a word. You've I listened attentively to the narrative many people in the United States even at this present day pretend to believe that the book agent, the lightning-rod man and Eli Perkins are the three great liars of the world. But these people don't know the Persians. With our liars at home mendacity is an acquired science and has taken years and years and much hard study to develop, and even then they often—at least occasion-ally—speak the truth. With them artistic lying is an effort. It takes thought and pains to produce it to perfection. Not so with the Persian. The modern Farsee is a natural l'ar. It goes against his grain, against ail he holds most saered in this queer world, to speak the trath. It is born with him, this inveterate love of prevarication, and it is bred in the bone for generations and generations.

I have noticed with the interest the student of human nature is liable to feel in such cases, how astonished the Farsec is when he has caught h mself unawares telling the truth.. He then is out of his role, and feels so abashed and ashamed of h mself that he looks sheepish and guilty; much as American might after getting off an awful fib. Even with such a people, however, when the noble art of romaneing is carried to such perfection, moments will arise when it is desirable to know and hear the truth. And for such occasions the stock of Persian adjuration, oaths, curses and appeals seems almost inexhau-tible. of the funn est is Rishe mera Kaffan Kerd ! (L. terally, May you put my beard in the winding sheet.) I do not know where they get their lying propensites from, these Persians; but that they are the most invidious, insidious, unconscionable story-tellers in the world there is no doubt. It is true that every race which has suffered for many centuries from oppression and has been tumpled under the foot of despotic rulers of foreign blood has become steeped in insincerity, and that Punic faith has taken with them the place of the genuine article. The people of Persia have been so down trodden, misruled and frightened out of their wits for a thousand years past that that fact may expla n all I don't know. I leave that for samebody else to find out. - Teheran tor. San Francisco Chronicle.

HE DEVOURS STONES.

The Colorless Life Led by Dom Pedro's A New Hampshire Glass-Eater Who Is No Professional and No "Fake.

"This is Harry Ollis, of Keene, N. not even to church, unless chaperoned H.," said Thomas Linsky of Main street, by one of the family, or some other lady, Charlestown Neck, "and I want you to generally of mature age. Nothing could sit down a moment or two and see him be more colorless than the life of a young eat glass and devour stones. Mr. Ollis is not a professional man, but an ordinary citizen like ourselves. I did not believe until I saw the act performed by him that a human being could actually make a meal off of glass and small derstood by parents, and those who are stones. Now, if you are ready, I shall able do so, but a girl, what need has she for an education? They would laugh at Mr. Ollis. What will you first eat?" Mr. Ollis. What will you first eat?" Ollis smiled and said: "I guess I'll try a lamp chimney."

The article was brought and the man, who sat opposite the reporter at the table, began to break the chimney with his right hand. After he had got sevpleces of the size he desired, he "You are a reporter and have probably seen a good many fakes. Some of my friends go so far as to say that I can, in addition to eating glass and deyouring small stones, eat tacks and telegraph wire and drink kerosene oil, but I can't. I can practice the arts of prestidigitator and make some people think I do all these things, but when I say to you that I am going to eat pieces of this glass which you see before us, I mean it. That's glass, isn't it? You won't deny that?"

The visitor took a piece of it in hand and said he was satisfied. Ollis again began to break the glass with his fist, and in doing so cut one of his fingers, which required a little attention.
Finally he said: "Bring me a glass of water, and I'll eat my lune ... con. water was brought, and Ollis began to chew and swallow glass, with an ap-parent disregard for results which was astonishing in the highest degree. He did not attempt to swallow without taking a drink of water. The first piece of glass cut his mouth and some blood followed, but he continued with his lunch till the chimney was nearly all eaten. "If a man would give me fifty dollars in gold I wouldn't swallow a piece of glass," said Arty Johnson, vicepresident of the Alligators' Social Club.

"I don't understand how others can do

"Neither do I," said Linsky, "for if you give a dog powdered glass on a piece of meat you'll kill him."

"Well, I chew and swallow glass," continued Ollis, as he began to eat a "I should think you would find a lamp chimney and a tumbler pret'y heavy remarked the reporter. "Oh," replied Ollis, "when I don't want a heavy meal I eat a light of glass. Wait a minute and I'll chew up a window pane.'

After concluding his lunch on glass a half dozen or more of small ston s were laid on the table, and after carefully dipping each in water Ollis swallowed them and then remarked: "The reason why I swallow these stones is because I sometimes have a sour stomach and don't want to have the glass come up in my throat."

"How long have you been eating glass and swallowing stones?" inquired the visitor.

"Since I was ten years old," replied Ollis. "Allow me to tell you how I came to do it. When I was about the age I spoke of, my uncle, who used to read to me frequently in the evening, took up a copy of the New York Herald and read aloud a story of a Count residing in Paris, who, after drinking a glass of champagne, would eat the wine glass. often heard of the champion liar, and and at its conclusion I said to myself if a Count can eat glass I can. A day or two later I tried the experiment. I was pretty well scared and kept thinking I might die, for you know a boy will sometimes do things that frighten him, but nothing serious came from my first attempt and so I continued to do it. I suppose you can do it as well as I can. I don't know as there is any thing different in our internal organization.

"You want to know how I came to devour stones. I will tell you. You notice that I say I swallow glass and devour stones. I can't chew a stone; I can devour it; you see the difference. As I was about to say, I began devouring stones, that is, stones not larger than the end of my thumb, after I had had a talk with a sword-swallower. He sa'd it was easy enough, and that the stones would not hurt me. He put a stone in his mouth, and then pushed it down his throat with the point of the sword. I came to the conclusion, the same as ' did in the case of the Court of Paris, that f he could do it I could, and consequently I added stones to my bill of fare. I am thirty-seven years old." "Would you be willing to submit to a scientific examination."

"Would I? I should be only too glad. Of course the doctors will not believe that I actually chew and swal-low glass. I recollect meeting Dr. Griffin , of the quarantine department, in a hotel on one occasion. He doubt-ed that I could chew and swallow glass and survive, and went so far as to say that if I could really do it then medical and surgical science had been greatly at fault. I told the doctor if he would send and get a piece of glass that I would demonstrate to him the correctness of my assertion. He did so, and I ate and swallowed the glass. What I have eaten has never hurt me, and you can see for yourself that I am fat and healthy-looking."-Boston Globe.

ODD ADDRESSES.

Some of the Curiosities Which Have Passed Through English Post-Offices. Many oddly-addressed letters daily pass through the post-offices. Several of the rhyming kind are somewhat remarkable for the poetical skill displayed by the writers.

A clever example is given in the following, addressed to Sir Walter Scott during one of his visits to London:

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

A Column Devoted to the Interests of Farmers and Stockmen

Six hundred tons of honey will be harvested in Ventura county, Cal. this season.

With hay above $10 per ton it is very poor policy to feed cattle that when sold will not bring top prices. Good ripe fruit is never too plentiful for use, but it may be so abundant that marketing will not give profit. Nobody has seen ground harrowed too much as a preparation for wheat for it is hardly possible to get too fine tilth.

If swine are to be kept on the farm the best profits will be found in the finest breeds that run into matured meat the first year.

The methods of wheat farming in these days of hurry and worry to get work done cheaply, are much inferior to those employed a few years ago when hindrances were less troublesome than now.

Despite the numerous chapters of weed encroachments that have filled reams upon reams of agricultural papers their extent increases, and each succeeding year finds them more firmly established.

Mr. George Graham, of Beaver Creek, Clackamas county, Oregon, threshed an average of 40 bushels of grain, wheat and oats, off of 25 acres. The most of this land has been in constant use for the last 25 years.

It is said that a tablespoonful of powdered alum, sprinkled into a hogshead of water and stirred, will in a few hours, precipitate to the bottom all the impure particles and leave the water clear and pure as spring water. Four gallons would need but a tea-

The turnip crop in all parts of this country and in Canada is reported as very poor. The dry weather and insects have interfered with the growth of the plants. Roots that grow underground, like carrots and parsnips, have done much better, as they have not been exposed to the dry air and the heat of the sun.

Apple, peach, pear, plum and cherry trees set along boundary lines of farms interfere very little with cultivation, and their fruit is produced almost without cost after the trees are well established, while at the same time they may serve a useful purpose as screens to mitigate the force of driving storms.

PRESERVING Eggs .- The following is the "Havana process" of preserving eggs, the formula for which has been kept a secret or sold to persons who were willing to pay $2 for it: Take twenty-four gallons of water and put in it twelve pounds of unslaked lime in the world for Coughs, &c. and four pounds of salt. Stir well several times a day and then let it stand and settle until perfectly clear. Then draw off twenty gallons of the clear lime and salt water. By putting a spigot in the barrel about four inches above the bottom you can draw off the clear water and leave the settlings. Then take five ounces of baking soda, five ounces of cream tartar, five ounces saltpeter, five ounces borax and one ounce of alum; mix and dissolve in a gallon of boiling water, which should be poured into your twenty gallons of lime water. This will fill a whisky barrel about half full, and such a barrel holds 150 dozen eggs. Let the water stand one inch above the eggs. Cover with an old cloth and put a bucket of the settlings over it. Do not let the cloth hang over the barrel. As the water evaporates add more, as the eggs must be kept covered.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 2, 1885.
Drs. STARKEY & PALEN.—Gentlemen:—
Permit me to express my hearty recognition of the good your Compound Oxygen treatment has done in my own household.
One of our family has been several years treatment has done in my own household. One of our family has been several years afflicted with a combination of lung, head and nerve difficulties very severe, and resisting every form of medical application. He had tried physicians literally by the score changes of climate South and West; and had grown hopeless nearly altogether. You know how complex was his case, and how apparently beyond help, for he visited you in person when but just able to be off is bed. You did not think him curable. Nor can I say that he was cured; but he is bed. You did not think him curable. Nor can I say that he was cured; but he was amazingly helped. He tried the Compound Oxygen with little faith in it, and his cough grew less, his strength greater. His nervous condition improved steadily. Whenever the Oxygen was intermitted for a time he lost ground. Last Spring he had become so well and strong that the Treatment did not seem necessary, and he gave the hop crop has not turned out as ment did not seem necessary, and he gave it up. He had regained his former weight his cough was rarely ever heard, by night or day; he walked about with vigor, and attended actively to business. His wonattended actively to business. His won-derful improvment surprised himself and all who knew him.

Drs. Starkey & Palen 15.9 Arch Street, Philadelph a, the dispensers of this remarkable curative agent, will send, without charge, their Treatise on Com-pound Oxygen, giving all desired informa-tion in regard to it, to any applicant.

Orders for the Compound Oxygen Home Treatment will be filled by H. A. Mathews, 615 Powell Street, San Francisco.

In the bodily mechanism when the liver gets out of order. Constipation, dyspepsia, contamination of the blood, imperfect assimilation, are certain to ensue. But it is easy to prevent these consequences, and remove their cause, by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which stimulates the biliary organ and regulates its action. The direct result is a disappearance of action. The direct result is a disappearance of the pains beneath the ribs and through the shoulder blade, the nausea, headaches, yellowness of the skin, furred look of the tongue, and sour odor of the breath, which characterize liver complaint. Sound digestion and a regular habit of body are blessings also secured by the use of this celebrated restorative of health, which imparts a degree of vigor to the body which is its best guarantee of safety from malarial epidemics. Nerve weakness and over-tension are relieved by it, and it improves both appetite and sleep.
