Thanksgiving.

Yesterday was our thanksgiving day. The custom of giving public thanks to God for the blessings of the year is almost as old as history. Three thousand walk in town is that on the east side of C street leading south from Third. Do build a new one. The old one is so patched now that one cannot tell how it esque festivities. It was the harvest years ago witnessed the Jewish Feast of feast. Its glory passed away centuries ago, though it is still observed by the life.

Jews in all lands. The Greeks and the Romans had their Harvest Festivals; fetes of Ceres, the goddess of corn and tillage; offerings to Diana and to Jove. But the Greeks and the Romans gave thanks for bloody victories over enemies; for contests which flattered their pride and ambition; for marm left. How is it C? purely material good fortune, such as prosperous crops, or the passing away of a plague or a terrible storm.

In the early days of the Puritan colony at Plymoth, there came a period of sickness, drouth and threatened famine. The people assembled and prayed for rain. The prayer was answered and Tuesday. horses to sell, on the sixth inst., and the crops were sayed. Then they appointed a thanksgiving. This was the begining of New England annual thanks-were appointed. An autumn of harvest brought the promise of better days. President Lincoln then issued a proclamation for a National Thanksgiving. This was the beginning of the observance of our national Harvest Feast.

Our Thanksgiving was meant by its sponsors to celebrate as much moral and intellectual, as material benefits. Inded, the early Puritans rejoiced far more over the increased godliness of his community than over a victory over the poor Indian, or a good harvest. And so since though perhaps to a less absorbing degree, have their descendants, at least the most thoughtful and enlightened, of good things we saw foretold the excellent repast to which the boys sat down in the evening. To say they had a good support is drawing it very mild a good supper is drawing it very mild. tellectual and moral advance, the increasing education, the greater submission to religious ideas, the better accord between nation and nation, and between neighbor and neighbor as well as material prosperity, and the triumph of the arts of industry and peace.

The day has proved one of universal benevolence, and it well becomes a christian nation to perpetuate it in the spirit in which it was instituted.

In our own beautiful little city the day was observed as is becoming and meet Business houses were closed and services were held in different churches; each citizen gathering at his place of the benefits received at His hands during the past year.
