College Notes.

There seems to be a large amount of what, for lack of a better term, might be called drifting in educational interests. Let us make the meaning clear. There is decided hesitancy on the part of those who have children to educate. Boys and girls are sent to school, it is true, but why? Because neighbor So-and-so sends his. In short, pride is made the motive. In another case poverty stands in the way of the child, and a brief education is resorted to in order to avoid the humiliation, if not the disgrace, in the ranks of poverty. This course is laudable, but the motives are rather mercenary. In thousands of instances force of circumstances determines the educational destiny of the young life. It may be providential that many are brought up and out of straightened circumstances into broad manly culture, but it is not providential for a parent to pay no regard for the highest culture and development of the child. This is saying much. To be thus regardless of the higher motives in sending to college is to leave all to a deftless, rushing tide. Hence I say these are drifting. There is a moving on with a heedless crowd, who live, but who can scarcely give a reason why. It this heedless way of making destiny was exhibited in education alone it would be more tolerable. It is in every pursuit the same. A young man chooses a profession and rushes headlong into it, not knowing definitely whether he is adapted for such a calling. How can he know until he has studied and mastered his own mental composition? How can the parent, who is supposed to know more than the child, determine this momentous question without having given the child a most thorough course of education? And how can they be educated in this higher sense without going to college?

WILLAMETTE SPUDS N. G.—Some of the farmers of the neighborhood, says the Ashland Tidings, who planted seed potatoes shipped from the Willamette last spring, are now buying potatoes for their own use through the winter. The potatoes never sprouted at all, and some of the victims suspect that they (the tubers) were scalded or salted before being shipped. Whether it was done by design or accident can only be conjectured, but it certainly has helped in some degree the chances of selling Willamette potatoes here again this year.
BAND OF HOPE PICNIC.—Saturday was the day for the Band of Hope picnic, and a merry day it was for the little folks. At noon they met at the M. E. church, from which they marched to the Grange hall, where at one o'clock they had a picnic dinner. After which there were recitations and singing by the children and several short speeches by different ministers. Parents and friends of the little ones were there and a pleasant afternoon was spent.
NEW STABLE.—Messrs Logan Bros. & Henderson are receiving bids for a new stable building to be built adjoining their stable on Third and D streets. The work will probably be commenced some time next week.

One week from to-day will be city election day. I understand there will be an effort made to elect a saloon ticket. We have been without a saloon one year and it is hard to say whether the experiment has given satisfaction or not. I am inclined to think that it has not been altogether a success.

Passed Away.
Captain George Jerome the pioneer steamboatman of the Willamette, died in Portland, at 2:30 p. m. Saturday from blood poisoning, and was buried from the First Congregational church at 1:30 p. m. Sunday under the auspices of the Odd Fellows. The remains were interred in River View cemetery. Captain Jerome was about 61 years old, and has been a steamboat officer on the Willamette since 1852. He has many old friends in this vicinity. In speaking of him a Portland paper says: "There were few men who lived so long in Oregon and yet were so little known to the great mass of our citizens. This was the growth of his character, for he was a natural gentleman modest and retiring to a degree that almost amounted to diffidence. And yet his was a nature like Nelson's who only knew fear by the way it was spent. Had his boat caught fire, Jerome would have stood at the wheel and burned to death with the stoical fortitude of a Nez Perce warrior. He was as sensitive and sympathetic as he was honest and temperate. From 1868 to 1875 he commanded the popular steamboat "Fannie Patton," on the upper Willamette, and of all the hundreds and thousands who traveled with him none can be found that will not say with us, "This was a man."
