Pleasant times were had at the Prairie school house, and Pleasantdale church on Christmas eve. At the former place ladders were used instead of a tree. Several valuable pieces of real estate are offered for sale in this issue of the TELEPHONE. Whoever first takes advantage of the offers will secure bargains. As the Orient was coming to Dayton one day last week, the wheel became almost a total wreck by striking on something in the river. It delayed them four hours. At the residence of A. J. Apperson, Saturday evening the little folks were given a very pleasant party. A large number were present; refreshments were served and all enjoyed themselves immensely. Orders for job printing are constantly coming into this office from all parts of the county. We are glad to see that people know good work when they see it, and we fill all orders promptly, and guarantee satisfaction. Am Shadden has made a target with his shot gun that is better than anything we have ever seen for close shooting. In a 24-inch circle, with No. 8 shot, 35 yards, he put 420 with one barrel and 390 with the other. The narrow gauge has considerably reduced the price of transportation between the towns on this side of the river and Portland. The fare from Lafayette to Portland has been fixed at $1.24, and from Sheridan to Portland $2.14. C. H. THE WEST SHORE.—The holiday number of the West Shore is the handsomest that most excellent western magazine has ever issued. Many of its illustrations are printed in five colors, and none of them in less than three. They are highly artistic, both in design and execution, and are especially appropriate to the season. An elegant, large engraving of Mt. Hood, the famous snow peak of the Cascade mountains, accompanies the number as a supplement. It is executed in eight colors and embossed and is by far the most beautiful reproduction of the grand scenery of the west yet made by the printing press. The literary features of the magazine are most excellent. The holiday number and supplement will be sent to any address upon receipt of fifty cents by the publisher. They will be sent free to all who subscribe now for 1887. Subscription price, $2.00 per year. Address L. Samuel, publisher of the West Shore, Portland Oregon.

BURGLARY.—Sunday afternoon, between 4 and 5 o'clock, some one entered the butcher shop of Bangasser & Keller, by kicking out a panel in one of the back doors. George Bangasser had deposited a sack containing about $400 in gold between the mattresses of a bed in the back part of the shop, and upon investigation it was found to be missing. It seemed that this was what the burglar wanted, and evidently knew just where to find it, as nothing else about the shop was disturbed. There was a good safe in the shop, and it seems strange that a man would hide money in a bed when he could lock it up in a good safe. Some one had evidently watched Mr. Bangasser hide the money, or they could not have found it so readily. No clue to the thief has been discovered.

CRUSHED BY THE CARS.—Homer Lowe a young man about 28 years of age, was run over at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, by the McMinnville express train, and died from the effects of his injuries a few minutes afterward. Lowe had ridden up on the front platform of the last car from the lower end of town, and, on reaching Taylor street, attempted to jump off. He missed his footing, but held on to the guard-rail and was dragged underneath the front and rear wheels of the car passing over him. Homer was well known here, having been a train hand on the above road off and on for a long time and, also having worked in this city. He has many friends here who will be pained to learn of his sad death.

TRIPLE ANNIVERSARY.—Saturday last we accepted an invitation to dine with our worthy friends, Mr. and Mrs. John Narver. It was a day deserving of special mention, being Mr. Narver's birthday, and the anniversary of their marriage, as well as New Year's day. The dinner was a fine one, ample for the celebration of the triple anniversary, and was duly appreciated by the few invited guests present. May our good friends live to enjoy many and many a return of the day, which means so much to them, and may each succeeding year be fraught with additional peace and joy for them.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.—Saturday was a quiet day, although not so much so as Christmas. Many new year callers were out, and the "rounds" included a great many houses. Besides the list announced in the papers, there were quite a number of ladies who received informally. Of course, everybody was at home to friends. Overcoats were a superfluity and the day was mostly clear. Instead of the jingle of the sleigh bells, the clatter of feet on dry sidewalks was heard. It was surely a beneficent introduction to the new year.

REVIVAL MEETINGS.—Commencing with last night there will be revival meetings at the C. P. church every night this week commencing at 7 o'clock. The meetings will be conducted by Rev. T. H. Henderson, alone during the fore part of the week. During the latter part of the week Rev. Van Patton, of Dayton, W. T., is expected to be here, and assist in conducting the services. There will also be revival meetings every night during the week at the Baptist church, conducted by Rev. G. J. Burchett, commencing at 7 p. m.

AGENCIES WITHDRAWN.—The Oregonian of January 1 says: To-day Wells, Fargo & Co. pull up all their agencies in Washington territory and all in eastern Oregon, and will confine their operations altogether to the Willamette valley and Astoria. There were three express companies doing business in the inland empire—the Northern Pacific, the Pacific and Wells, Fargo & Co., and the traffic was not sufficient to support all three, hence the withdrawal of the latter. The Puget sound agencies were also discontinued.

A TRADE CENTER.—One of the oldest and best established places of business in McMinnville is that of W. H. Bingham, the furniture man. Mr. Bingham has been in business here for a number of years, and by energetic attention to business has made his store one of the heaviest trade centers in Yamhill county. Competent workmen are always employed in the general manufacturing and repairing, and his customers will be guaranteed perfect satisfaction.

DIED.—Gaines H. Burns died at the residence of his father, in this city yesterday morning, Jan. 3, 1887, about 7 o'clock, aged 23 years. His death was very sudden, as he had only been sick since last Friday. His funeral will take place to-morrow from the C. P. church, at 1 o'clock p. m. Rev. T. H. Henderson conducting the services.

BUSINESS CHANGE.—A. M. Tazzart has sold out his tailoring business to Mr. O. Williams of Dallas. Mr. Williams has been in the employ of Mr. Tazzart for some time and is known to be a good workman by most of our citizens. We shall be sorry to lose Tazzart; he is a jolly fellow, and an excellent workman.

College Notes.

It is a curious, as well as interesting, to note the origin of the names of some of the days of the week. Take Wednesday as an illustration. We are told that this name is derived from Woden, sometimes written Oden, and hence in its original form was Woden's day. With a slight change in the spelling you can see how we get Wednesday. It may be that the reader would like to know something about this Woden. Well, he was one of the old Scandinavian deities. He is said to have regulated the days and seasons by placing the sun and moon in the heavens and determining their respective courses. He had a palace of gold and silver, beautiful in the extreme. Two ravens sat upon his shoulders, after having made the circuit of the whole earth, and reported to him all they had seen. At his feet lie two wolves, to whom he throws all the meat that is set before him, as he has no need of food. His oldest son's name was Thor. Thor was god of thunder. His strength lay in three things—his hammer, his belt of strength, and in his iron gloves. From his name is derived Thursday. There was also another god among the Scandinavian deities whose name was Frey. From Frey comes our Friday. Other days of the week are named in honor of certain divinities. Of course these names have lost all their religious significance. They do, however, remind one of a former period of ignorance and superstition. In fact, we are inseparably wedded to a race that has gone before, by our language and habits. It is not likely that those who come after us will be able to obliterate all trace of the existence of the present generation. The race is one, their interests largely common.

Mr. James Haynes started last Friday for his home in southern Oregon. He may be back before the school year closes. The janitor, Mr. Lynch, has been cleaning the building during the holidays. The hall floors will be mopped. Of course the boys will clean their boots before coming in. School begins on the 4th-to-day. Mrs. W. J. Crawford had quite a serious fall. It is thought that she sustained the fracture of a rib. The thermometer ranged above 40 deg. during the month of December. What do you think of the proposed students' paper. Will the literary society resume work after the holidays? It ought to. Mr. Frank Collard has purchased the property formerly owned by Miss F. E. Russ, on Collegeside, and has moved into the house. We are always glad to welcome new neighbors on Collegeside. The dwellers on Collegeside are not willing to be incorporated with the city in the proposed new charter. JACKSON.

Hibbs Convicted.

[Lewiston News.] The trial of this case was commenced on Tuesday of last week, most of the time on Monday being consumed in getting a trial jury. The indictments which were considered were number 22,768 and 22,773. The first was the same as the one tried in 1885, upon which the jury failed to agree and which stood over the term, and the other showed a variance from the proofs offered. Many witnesses were sworn on the part of the prosecution, some from Decatur, Ill., some from Salem and Portland, Oregon, one from Dayton, W. T., some from Pierce City, Idaho, and the remainder from Lewiston, Idaho, and some documentary evidence was shown, all tending to give a chain of evidence which it seemed impossible to impeach with all the learning and ability of learned counsel for the defense, and the prosecution rested. The defendant's counsel, for reasons best known to themselves declined to produce any evidence, but rested the defense. The Judge then gave the law of the case to the jury, and the jury were allowed to retire in charge of an officer, with instructions not to allow the jury to separate till they had come to a verdict, or found that an agreement could not be had. The jury were thus kept imprisoned from Friday night at 11 o'clock till last Monday afternoon when they came into court and reported that an agreement of "not guilty" on indictment number 22,773 and a disagreement on number 22,768. The Judge asked them whether they disagreed upon the law or upon the facts. The foreman answered that they disagreed upon the law, as to whether or not the facts proved constituted "forgery." The court referred them to his instructions given, and told them they must take those instructions as the law of the case, that it was not their province to discard those instructions if there was error in them, and that the defendant had his remedy in a higher court. With those suggestions the judge ordered them back to the jury room to reconsider the case. After the lapse of half an hour they came into court, and after being polled, they presented their verdict, which was in substance "not guilty" on indictment No. 22,773, and "guilty" on indictment No. 22,768, with a recommendation for mercy to the prisoner. The jury was then discharged until Tuesday morning. The judge reserved sentence. The great majority who heard the evidence in the case expected no other verdict, and hence appeared satisfied that the jury were true to their oaths, and that the verdict rendered was according to the law and the facts as shown to the jury.

How's This.—Mr. A. M. Hoffman brings us in some pea vines in full bloom, picked from his garden, four miles south of this city, on the second of January, also some willow twigs which were covered with buds and leaves; growing right above just as though it was not light in the middle of winter. If there is any country under the sun with a better climate than this, we would like to know where it is.

PASSED AWAY.—Mrs. Sarah Odell died near Dayton, at 2 p. m., on January 1, 1887, aged 83 years. Deceased was the mother of Gen. W. H. Odell, postmaster at Salem.

Happy Valley.

January, 1, 1887. Willie Casey is home for holidays. Our young friend Al. Ewing is attending school at Scio this winter. Heavy rains with dark nights and muddy roads is now the fashion. Ira Wilson of Washington county, is here visiting his sister, Mrs. S. A. Ewing. Several of our young folks attended the dance at Mrs. McPhillip's, and report a good time. We wonder where our bachelor goes, as he is away from home so much of his time. Watch out, V. Mrs. McPhillip and her grand daughter, Miss Rosa, reached home the 24th greatly benefited by their visit. A party is promised at the residence of Mr. Granville this evening, and everybody looks forward to a good time. Scarlet fever has visited this neighborhood. Two of Mr. Hopfield's children are down with it, but at last accounts were improving.

Jeff. Fenton has recently been in this vicinity surveying. He had some difficulty in finding some of the corner stakes, but has got them straightened at last. O. B. MERRY.

An Ocean Angry.

Probably no other light house in the world affords a better view of a storm on the ocean than does the light house on Tillamook rock, situated as it is far from shore. Saturday's Astorian contains the following account of a storm last month that will be read with interest: Chas. Hornung, head keeper at Tillamook rock light house, came up on the Manzanita yesterday. He reports stormy weather at the rock. The month of November was remarkably fine, but with December came terrible weather from the southeast. On the 16th the storm seemed to culminate in a severity unequalled in his four year's experience. On the morning of that day, the sea rose in solid masses of water and seizing three water tanks, each 4x4x8 feet in solidly constructed, broke and carried them away. Those tanks were 90 feet above the sea. Later on the water grew still rougher, a wall of water broke against the rock and rose far above, striking the light, which is 143 feet in height, and falling solidly on the roof. Solid to strike and liquid to drown, tons of water flew up in the air and fell with a crash as of a hundred hammers again and again on the roof of the light house. It cracked, the joists crushing in and admitting the water. The light trembled and the solid iron stanchions bent with the force of the blows. "For about a quarter of an hour," says Keeper Hornung, "it looked mighty scaly." Everything was afloat, and tables, chairs, etc., swimming about, the water thundered on the roof and poured in torrents through the rents its weight had made; chimneys disappeared, outhouses, etc., disappeared, and it seemed as though the end of all things had come as far as the Tillamook rock light house was concerned, when, suddenly, at the very height of the fury of the storm, the force of the waves abated, greatly to the relief of the keeper and his assistants, who essayed to repair the damages.

The next day the surface of the ocean was as calm and smiling as the placid bosom of a sunlit lake, and a skiff could cross to the mainland.

THAT CONFESSION.—During last week rumors were afloat that R. E. Marple, now in jail at Lafayette for the murder of D. I. Corker in October last and awaiting his trial, had made a full confession. Later on the story, like a rolling snow ball, grew and expanded into a double confession, in effect that he had not only murdered Corker, but also the French courtesan Emma Merlotin. These stories are without foundation. Marple has made no confession at all in regard to the murder, nor is he likely to do so. All efforts to connect him with the Merlotin murder have so far failed.
