College Notes.

Something was said in a former article in this column, pertaining to the weakness of the human race. It will be understood that we speak more particularly of the mind. It may be true that longevity is greatly affected by the modern modes of dissipation. The body is much abused. But while the body is being destroyed by reckless living, the mind is the greater sufferer. Were it not for the mind which has a temporary dwelling in the flesh, it would matter little what became of the body. Man's woes, sorrows and earthly joys have their fountain in the sentient spirit. Take away this image of the divine nature, and all that is left is dust and ashes. Dare anyone say that the training of the mind is not important? If the Spanish explorer could wade through trackless forests in search of the fabled fountain of youth surely the youth of this land should face every obstacle which stands in the way of obtaining a full development of the mind. There is joy in this world, there is happiness here, but the foolish and depraved seldom find either. Go into the narrow, crowded streets of some of our modern cities, where ignorance and vice reign. What do you find? Misery, want, and degradation. Weakness and insanity must follow any long-continued violation of nature's laws. It is sad to presume even that the mind should ever become weak and impotent. To believe that such a thing can take place is simply to become acquainted with the facts. Although the law regards every man sane until he is proven to be otherwise, it is rather difficult to define insanity and hence to know who possesses a sound mind. A well balanced mind is much to be admired, and a treasure worth coveting. Men covet gold. Why not "covet the best gifts"? Many reasons can be assigned for believing that the mind is becoming comparatively less active, and the reason more easily deformed than in former generations. But we must defer for the present the mention of these signs. In the meantime let every young man who thinks his life dear unto himself be exceedingly careful of the thoughts which find a home in the soul. Drive out vampires and leeches, and let the sweet strains of heavenly music play upon the soul and attune it to the harmony celestial.
Some of the students think it would be nice to have the grubbs cleared from the creek in front of the college. This would give a fine boating place during the high water in winter. The only objection is the river does not stay up but two or three weeks in the season. At present it is very high.
In college, as everywhere else, things must have their rage. After the holidays, hulkull with hazenuts was all the go. Now it is sparring. Even the ladies put on the gloves.
Miss Annie Young and Miss Mattie Martin were visitors at the college one day during the week.
Among those who made 100 in examination and recitation last term was Miss Fannie Baxter, whose name was omitted from the roll of honor last week.
We wish to acknowledge the receipt of a communication from "Z." We wish to dissent, however, from his last sentence. It is not "alone for McMinville college to answer" his question. This we have proven by former articles.
Shall we have a college mission meeting next Friday evening? It is the regular time.
There is some talk among members of having the college campus surveyed, platted and fixed up. It would be a fine thing to remove a few of the oaks from the grove and give the grounds an air of ease and freedom. Wonder if the citizens of the town would not like to contribute something toward the improvement. It would add greatly to the attractions of the town. JACKSON.

State Temperance Alliance Call.
The sixteenth annual session of the Oregon State Temperance alliance will convene in Salem, Oregon, on Wednesday, February 16, 1887, at 2 o'clock p. m. Each organized county alliance is entitled to twice as many delegates as there are members of the legislative assembly from that county. Also each church, Sunday school and temperance society is entitled to one delegate. Much depends upon this session of the alliance. The temperance forces of our state are on the eve of a great victory, or terrible defeat. The part each temperance and religious body take in supporting and making the state alliance a success, will have much to do in determining which it shall be. Then let there be a strong delegation from all parts of the state at this session of the alliance.
Greatly reduced rates of fare will be granted all delegates in attendance by the different lines of travel within the state.
