

"DON'T YOU WORRY."

How Shrewd Business Men Have Solved a Great Problem.

"Is there a fatality among our prominent men?" is a question that we often ask. It is a question that perplexes our leading medical men, and they are at a loss to know how to answer it.

We sometimes think that if the physicians would give part of the energy to the consideration of this question that they give to combatting other schools of practice, it might be satisfactorily answered.

The fights of "isms" reminds us often of the quarrels of old Indian tribes, that were only happy when they were annihilating each other.

If Allopathy makes a discovery that promises good to the race, Homoeopathy derides it and breaks down its influence. If Homoeopathy makes a discovery that promises to be a boon to the race, Allopathy attacks it.

It is absurd that these schools should fancy that all of good is in their methods and none in any other. Fortunately for the people, the merit which these "isms" will not recognize, is recognized by the public, and this public recognition, taking the form of a demand upon the medical profession, eventually compels it to recognize it.

Is it possible that the question has been answered by shrewd business men? A prominent man once said to an inquirer, who asked him how he got rich, "I got rich because I did things while other people were thinking about doing them." It seems to us that the public have recognized what this fatality is, and how it can be met, while the medical profession have been wrangling about it.

By a careful examination of insurance reports we find that there has been a sharp reform with reference to examinations, (and that no man can now get any amount of insurance that has the least development of kidney disorder,) because they find that sixty out of every hundred in this country do, either directly or indirectly, suffer from kidney disease. Hence, no reliable company will insure a man except after a rigid urinary examination.

This reminds us of a little instance which occurred a short time ago. A fellow editor was an applicant for a respectable amount of insurance. He was rejected on examination, because, unknown to himself, his kidneys were diseased. The shrewd agent, however, did not give up the case. He had an eye to business and to his commission, and said: "Don't you worry; you get a half dozen bottles of Warner's safe cure, take it according to directions and in about a month come around, and we will have another examination. I know you will find yourself all right and get your policy."

The editor expressed surprise at the agent's faith, but the latter replied: "This point is a valuable one. Very many insurance agents all over the country, when they find a customer rejected for this cause, give similar advice, and eventually he gets the insurance."

What are we to infer from such circumstances? Have shrewd business men, as well as other shrewd business men, found the secret answer to the inquiry? Is it possible that our columns have been proclaiming, in the form of advertisements, what has proved a blessing in disguise to millions, and yet by many ignored as an advertisement?

In our files we find thousands of strong testimonials for Warner's safe cure, no two alike, which could not exist except upon a basis of truth; indeed, they are published under a guarantee of $5,000 to any one who will disprove their correctness, and this offer has been standing, we are told for more than four years.

Undoubtedly this article, which is simply dealing out justice, will be considered as an advertisement and be rejected by many as such.

We have not space nor time to discuss the proposition that a poor thing could not succeed to the extent that this great remedy has succeeded, could not become so popular without merit even if pushed by a Vanderbilt or an Astor.

Hence we take the liberty of telling our friends that it is a duty that they owe to themselves to investigate the matter and reflect carefully, for the statements published are subject to the refutation of the entire world. None have refuted them; on the contrary hundreds of thousands have believed them and proved them true, and in believing have found the highest measure of satisfaction, that which money cannot buy, and money cannot take away.

—The Christ Episcopal Church building on Canal street, in New Orleans, was sold at auction recently for $75,000. The building will be torn down and a business block will be erected in its place. The congregation will build a new church edifice up-town. This congregation was the first Protestant society organized in the Southwest, and the ground on which the church building stands was the gift of Judah Touro, the Hebrew philanthropist. —N. O. Times.

—Teachers in England are making an effort to secure the election of some of their number to Parliament in order that certain reforms demanded by them may be more earnestly advocated on the floor of the House of Commons. The American teachers, who likewise have grievances which they would be pleased to have Congress consider, ought to profit by this example. It is surely possible to make room for a teacher in the National Assembly. —Chicago Current.

INDIAN GAMBLERS.

How the Hand Games of the Shoshones and Bannocks is Played.

The Shoshones and Bannocks, on the Shoshone reservation, in Idaho, have, like most Indians, a fondness for gambling. To an observer the "hand game," so common among these Indians, would seem more like a recreation than a propensity for gambling, for no matter how interesting the game may be good humor invariably prevails.

A party of Shoshones and Bannocks were encamped near the station this afternoon, five of whom—two men and three squaws—were deeply engrossed in the "hand game." After half an hour's close attention I managed to obtain a fair idea of the game. The two men were partners, and sat facing their opponents, the three squaws. In front of each of the opposing sides was a pile of twenty small sticks, to be used as "counters," and in the center of the space intervening was the money, some three or four dollars. Two well-polished pieces of convex-shaped bone, as large as a lead pencil in the largest part and possibly three inches in length, well wrapped with cord or sinew for an inch or more in the center and two pieces of the same dimensions unwrapped, or presenting the white surface only, constituted the gambling outfit. Two of the three squaws grasped a wrapped and unwrapped bone, one in each hand, and together with the third squaw, began moving their hands rapidly from side to side, describing a half-circle, and accompanying the motion with a peculiar nasal humming. The men were now all attention, it being their duty, it seems, to guess which hand of either of the three squaws contained the white bone. Whenever the guesser lost one stick from his joint pile of twenty was transferred to the pile in front of the squaws, and when he won the bones, together with one of the sticks, immediately passed into his possession. As soon as his partner was equally successful, it became the men's turn to hold the bones. The actions of the two men now were slightly dissimilar to those gone through by the three squaws. The bones were held one in each hand as had been done by their opponents, but, instead of swinging the hands back and forth, they were placed under the arms, accompanied by an up and down motion of the body and the same peculiar humming. When a squaw made an unlucky guess she would pay the usual forfeit, and the man, by a dexterous movement, would throw both bones a short distance in the air, showing which hand held the bone, and which the plain bone. Then changing the bones from hand to hand beneath the folds of his blanket or behind his back, his maneuvers were continued until the bones passed out of his possession. And so the game progressed, first one side holding the bones and then the other. As the bones were changed from hand to hand beneath the blanket or behind the back, no effort being made to cheat, and a lucky guesser being the only requirement of a successful player, the games were always of indefinite duration, this one in particular lasting several hours. I was unable to find out precisely what part the third squaw took in the game, for at no time did I discover the bones in her possession, but as the hands of each of the three squaws were held close together and in the swaying motion often came in close proximity to those of the squaw sitting next, it is probable that the third squaw was used to mislead the men, whom, it would appear, were regarded as the more skillful players. —Cor. Philadelphia Times.

THE HEDGE-HOG.

A Peculiar Little Creature Which is Not Affected by Animal Poisons.

A gentleman states that he has seen, and that often, a tame hedgehog in his possession run toward the wall of an area, and, without a moment's pause for preparation, throw itself off, contracting at the same instant into a ball, in which state it reached the ground from a height of about fourteen feet. So softly did it fall that after only a few moments it unfolded itself, and did not creep but ran away.

On one occasion Mr. Lenz saw a fight between a hedgehog and a viper. When the hedgehog came near and smelt the snake—for with these animals the sense of sight is obtuse—he seized it by the head, and held it fast between her teeth, but without seeming to do it much harm, for, having disengaged its head, it assumed a furious and threatening attitude, and hissing violently, inflicted several severe bites on the hedgehog. The little animal did not, however, recoil from the bites of the viper, nor seem to care much about them. At last, when the viper was tired by its efforts, she again seized it by the head, which she ground between her teeth, compressing the fangs and glands of poison, and then eating every part of the body.

It is a most interesting fact, and one which you may not have heard before in the natural history of this animal, that the most violent animal poisons take no effect upon it—a fact which renders it of peculiar value in forests, where it appears to destroy a great number of noxious reptiles. This fact was vouched for by Mr. Lenz, and afterward confirmed by Doctor Buckland. Mr. Lenz says that he had in his house a hedgehog, which he kept in a large box, and which soon became very tame and familiar. He often put into the box some adders, which it attacked fiercely, seizing them indifferently by the head, the body or the tail; and he states that it did not appear afraid or embarrassed when they coiled themselves around its body. —Golden Days.

"Compound Oxygen—its Mode of Action and Results," is the title of a brochure of nearly two hundred pages published by J. M. STARKLEY & PALMER, 159 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., which gives to all inquirers full information as to this remarkable curative agent and a large record of surprising cures in a wide range of chronic cases—many of them after being abandoned to die by other physicians. It will be mailed free to any applicant.

A GENIAL RESTORATIVE.

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are emphatically a genial restorative. The changes which this great tonic remedy produces in the disordered organization are always agreeable, though surely progressive, never abrupt and violent. On this account it is admirably adapted to persons of delicate constitution and weak nerves, to whom the powerful mineral drugs are positively injurious. That it initiates those processes which result in the re-establishment of healthful vigor is conspicuously shown in cases where it is taken to overcome that fruitful cause of debility, indigestion, coupled, as it usually is, with biliousness and constipation. Through digestion, regular evacuation and abundant secretion, are results which promptly and invariably attend its systematic use. It is, besides, the best protective against malaria, and a first rate diuretic.

TOOK ALL HIS PAINS AWAY.

A. M. Chisholm, of No. 724 Stoddard Street, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"During my long residence in Canada I suffered for years from severe pains in my back, across the region of the kidneys, and by the constant use of ALCOCK'S PLASTER invariably obtained great relief. Upon removing to St. Louis, I was again troubled with the same complaint, and was advised to use Magnetic and other kinds of plaster, without being relieved of pain, so I fell back to my old friend ALCOCK, who gives me more relief than any other I have ever tried. I always recommend them to my friends and all who suffer from pains and aches of any kind."

—Nations and individuals alike fail to rule when they "forget God" and go into vain idolatries of self-gratification. The best histories which have come down to us have been written by men who felt profoundly this conviction. For one thing, and a rather important one in such a matter, they were afraid to tell lies. —J. A. Froude, in Youths' Companion.

—And now a chemist has found arsenic in clothing. Not content with adulterating our food, they must put poison in the clothes we wear. The time seems to have arrived when a man's life is not safe unless he stops eating and sweats off wearing clothes. —P. S.—We shall continue to wear clothes, anyway—poison or no poison. —Norristown Herald.

—Miss Etymology, will you please inform me why the Russian language contains such a superfluity of consonants?" asked a Harlem school-girl of her teacher. "That is an enigma," replied the teacher. "Can anybody enlighten me?" "A bright-eyed boy, whose father is a contributor to London Punch, answered: "I think I know." "Well, my boy, what is it?" "Because the Russians think that vowel play is only fair in war." The teacher presented him with an Afghan tudy as a token that she was worsted. —N. Y. Journal.

—Papa, do chickens always go to the country to spend the summer?" inquired a precocious Cass farm lad of six when the house was filled with guests at a dinner-party the other day. "Bless me, no! What put such an odd fancy into your little head, George?" "Why, I was out in the kitchen this morning when you kissed our girl, Jane, and when she turned red in the face and pretended to be mad, I heard you tell her that she should have a new silk dress when the 'old hen' went to the country for the summer." —Detroit Journal.
