North Yamhill

July 8, 1887.
ED. TELEPHONE.—Your correspondent at other points, in speaking of the weather, invariably complain of its being hot, but, honest, out we, up here at Eden of Yamhill county, situated in the north of Yamhill county, having nothing to complain of, are taking things cool, feeling confident that the prospect for good crops and prices in the near future will result in making us all feel better. With hearts full of good feeling toward mankind, to that extent that we will be able to retire to rest at night with a clear conscience and rise in the morning refreshed, with the expectation that eventually will be able to pay their bills, and make the rest of us happy—why shouldn't we.

J. H. Maddox, the persevering mail carrier from North Yamhill to Tillamook, reports the road in good condition. He makes his regular tri-weekly trip with pack, and arrives and departs on time.
J. A. Bistine, Dr. J. L. Hayes and A. E. McKern started this day for Nestucca for a three day's fishing. May famous luck attend them.
J. D. Edwards, our late postmaster, has taken a homestead of 160 acres on North Trask, about one mile above the toll gate. He has built a shanty and moved into it. Stock raising is the object.

The health of the community is excellent. Our druggist and physicians complain none.
Uncle Thomas Davis is no better. His near causes him a great deal of pain and restlessness.
Hay making is in full blast. The grass crop is good, and wild oats are abundant. Plums and apples will be scarce in many localities.

The W. C. T. U. cleared at their stand on the 4th over $35, which they propose to use in employing good speakers to speak in favor of the prohibitory amendment, at this place.
J. N. Reed in the employ of W. A. Howe was thrown from a mower on the 5th inst. and pretty badly bruised. No bones broken, but ankle badly sprained.
F. S. Glandon sold 90 acres of land near this place on the 5th inst, all good grain land; price thirty-five hundred, to Frank and August Forras, very cheap.

Frank Houswirth, R. B. Miller and Apollis Miller went to the mountains a few days ago hunting, they were out several days. Frank says he don't know where he was, and the man that will go there twice is a d— fool.
W. C. Mesner, who with his family moved to the Klamath Lake county one year ago, has returned. He says that Yamhill is good enough for him.

The Telephone

As well be here as elsewhere. This paper has changed proprietors, and from this issue will be conducted as a conservative paper—democratic in politics, but primarily devoted to the interest and progress of Yamhill county. The reader of this paper need not expect us to be able to give them a paper such as we could hope for, but in the near future we shall enlarge it to a seven column weekly, and fill it full of local correspondence from every town in the county, and full of light and practical editorials.
To the business men and women of the county we offer special means of advertisement and respectfully solicit a share of their patronage. This venture has come to stay and grow, and there is one thing certain—if we obtain the support of the people of this county—we shall give them as good a paper as is published in the valley. Let every man feel invited to solicit subscriptions for the West Side Telephone.

Fourth of July Sermon.

The following sermon preached in St. James church, on Sunday, July 3 by the Rev. John C. Fair, rector, is given to the public by special request of those bearing same.
Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.—2 Cor. 3:17.
We meet to-day, not only to worship the Lord of heaven and earth, but also, on the eve of the Declaration of Independence, do we here celebrate by our anthems of praise and thanksgiving, the glorious liberty which our fathers hath obtained for us.
We have not indeed shared the toil of the march, the peril of the fight, the dismay of the retreat. We have not sat, night after night, beside the camp fire, shared the same rough soldiers fare; nor together heard the roll of the reveille, which called them to duty, or to the beat of the tattoo, which gave the signal for the hardy sleep of the soldier with the earth for his bed, the knapsack for his pillow.

We have met in a peaceful valley, on the eve of the morrow, while the sunlight has just risen from behind yonder heights, the sunlight that, to-morrow noon, will glimmer not on scenes of blood, but on a land of liberty, of peace and of peace.

Brethren, does not the voice of nature seem to echo the glories of the hour? The flag of our country droops not heavily from yonder staff; the breeze catches its silken titer away along the green plain, the plain that spreads before us, and in its majestic splendor, glows in the sunlight of liberty and love.

The eventful past can alone make reply to your inquiry, as to who occasioned this glorious country of ours to be a land of freedom.
Let the desolate plains of the past, the blood-soddened valleys, the haunted farm houses, blackening in the sun, the sacked village, and the ravaged town, answer; let the whitening bones of the butchered farmer, strewn along the fields of his homestead, answer; let the starving mother, with the babe clinging to the withered breast that can afford no sustenance, let her answer; with her death rattle mingling with the murmuring tones that mark the last struggle for life, let the dying mother and her babe answer!

My friends, I might urge you to greater thankfulness towards the memories of those who thus bled and died amidst the galling oppression of British wrongs! Vainly, I might tell you of your father butchered in the silence of midnight on the plains of Trenton; I might picture his grey hairs dabbled in blood; I might ring his death-shriek in your ears.

Shelburne, I might tell you of a mother butchered, and a sister outraged—the lonely farm house, the night assault, the roof in flames, the shouts of the troopers, as they dispatch their victim, the cries for mercy, the pleadings of innocence for pity. I might paint this all again, in the terrible colors of the vivid reality, if I thought we needed such, to kindle a fresh the true spark of patriotism.
But no, as the woods of the opposite height to flag their long shadows over the green of the meadows, so do those memories only cast shadows, as retrospects of that which has gone before. For now our land rests in peace. War is not here, wrong is not. From the eternal solitude of the green woods arise the blue smoke of the settlers cabin; throughout the land golden fields of grain look forth from amidst the waste of the wilderness, and the glad music of human voices awake the silence of the forest.

And hence, to-day, liberty! freedom! an, my friends, how the blood warms and the heart throbs at the very sound of the words. We all feel, and, in proportion to the nobleness of our aspirations, do we deeply feel that this is indeed the good of all generous human strivings. Yes, the good of all our individual strivings is the individual or the interior freedom. This has been dimly seen by philosophers of all ages. According to Aristotle, the good or end of humanity is virtue; according to Plato it is spiritual beauty or harmony among the faculties; Fichte, makes the good of humanity, the life according to reason; Hegel, makes it freedom. They are all right. These expressions contain all the same truth, viewed from different points. They are all partial views of the same glorious truth. In scripture alone do we find the whole truth told. From the scripture point of view, he who conscientiously pursues the path of duty, and lives according to the law of love, and thereby attains holiness, he and he alone, possesses true freedom; in other words, the sincere christian is the only true free man. "Where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

But, alas! how entirely different from this is the ordinary notion of freedom. How much crime, how much anarchy and confusion, how much war and strife, yes, how much oppression, and tyranny, and slavery, have been enacted in the sacred name of freedom! So entirely different is the usual conception of freedom from that given in scripture, that even religious men seem to think that the freedom spoken of in the text is something quite different from, and having no connection with, the freedom after which all generous nature strives, and the irreligious and worldly men even regard the spirit of christianity as antagonistic to the spirit of freedom.
To them religion is bondage, and unbelief and lawlessness and heaven defiance is freedom; to them lawless acting is free activity. But the scriptures are right. Holiness is the only true interior freedom, and the only true exterior freedom is that which is based upon the interior and modeled according to the same law.

This, then, is the true, the only true freedom, the basis of all others. This is that freedom in comparison with which all other so-called freedom sinks into insignificance. This is the true reality, of which the other is the external form.
Then, while we celebrate our glorious independence on the morrow, let us ever remember our dependence upon God, for we can accomplish no good thing without Him. We may entertain political liberty as a blessing, and liberty of thought as a blessing, but we must have the greatest blessing, liberty of the conscience and the will; telling us of a freedom from a sense of sin, when all is known to have been pardoned through the atoning blood; freedom from a slavish fear of our Father in heaven, when conscience is offered to His unerring eye morning and evening by that penitent love which fixes its eye upon the crucified, for "It the son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed."

In singing a new to-day the songs of our redemption, while calling to mind the struggles of a war long since ended, are we not hereby cautioned, that our individual life is one continual warfare, our victory in this, yet to be war. In this great war there are no neutrals. Every one who is not on Christ's side is against Him. Every one therefore must choose his side. On which side will you be? Will you be on the side of Christ which is the side of blessing? or will you be on the side of sin, which is the side of cursing? Will you be on the side of godliness, which calls down blessings upon America? or will you be on the side of wickedness, which will draw down curses upon it? Yes, every wicked act tends to draw down a curse upon the country, and in that sense is the worse of treasons.

Every good act on the contrary, every holy feeling, every true prayer, every victory over our baser appetites, every sacrifice of our will to the law of God. Every such act adds another stone to the spiritual rampart, which for so many years has surrounded and defended America. That rampart every one of us is either building up or pulling down.

Let us labor to repair the breaches in the rampart; let the words be spoken to us, which were formerly spoken to Ezekiel. "And I sought for a man among them that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it, but I found none." May such words never be spoken to our country! God grant that America never may be without men to make up the hedge and to stand in the gap before the Lord.

While living in this, our land of freedom, which is only freedom in time, let us look also, beyond, to the freedom in eternity. In that blessed world, in the unclouded presence of the Emancipator, the brand of slavery is inconceivable. In that world there is indeed a perpetual service; yet since it is the service of love made perfect, it is only by necessity the service of the free. "For where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty."

Don't Experiment.
You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat, Lung and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at Rogers & Todd's Drug Store.
