WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, March 26, 1888.

Chief Justice Waite is dead, was the startling announcement that fell upon Washington on Friday morning last. No one could believe it possible at first for although he was in his seventy-second year he was a remarkably well preserved man, and to judge from outward appearances likely to live for many years. He died suddenly from nervous action of the heart. He had been slightly ailing for several days but neither he nor his physicion realized that it was any thing more than a cold.

Chief Justice Waite presided over the supreme court last Monday and the long opinion in favor of the Bell patent in the celebrated telephone case, which occupied two hours in its reading, was his last work. He graduated from Yale college in 1837, and was appointed to the supreme bench from Ohio, by presi-

Among those already prominently mentioned for the vacant position are Speaker Carlisle, who is thought by many to have the best chances, because it is known that he was offered the last vacancy on the supreme bench before Mr. Lamar was appointed, and that he declined it very rejuctantly. Don M. Dickinson of Michigan, the present postmaster-general is considered to be second in the race, but he is hardly likely to receive the appointment unless the place be allowed to remain vacant until after the election, because he could not do the work mapped out for him in the coming campaign if he was chief justice.
