GILLMORE'S SWAMP ANGEL. THE GUN THAT Poured SCREECHING MISSILES INTO CHARLESTON. The First Messenger from the Mashed Battery in the Marsh—Accuracy of the Gunners—Incidents of the Cannonading. A Fuse Shell.

There are a good many people in Charleston, who had an intimate but somewhat unpleasant acquaintance with the Swamp Angel. One calm night in August, 1863, a strange noise was heard in the air.

The battery was the famous Swamp Angel. It consisted of a single 8-inch Parrott rifle mounted in the marsh and surrounded by a network of circular shafts.

The accuracy which the Swamp Angel gunners attained was remarkable. On one occasion the buildings on Brown's wharf were fired during the day.

Persecution shells were used by the Swamp Angel gunners every day. During the time the people of Charleston had abundant time to study the peculiarities of the percussion Parrott shell.

White the men were getting the dust out of their eyes and trying to lift up "Old Betsey" the "boom" which signified the advent of another messenger from the Swamp Angel was heard.

When new shells are made, try a broad horn on each end. This will prevent any head or foot to the article, thus making the work much more even.

Nobody ought to go to a dinner who is not a good listener, and if possible, an intelligent one. To listen with a show of intelligence is a great accomplishment.

Do not allow any frightful illustrations in your child's nursery books.

A lady whose garden happens to over look the garden of her next door neighbor was out looking at her flowers the other morning.

"Oh! don't you think you look awfully nice in your blue ribbon down there?"

"Just as the words 'down there' were out of her mouth she noticed, to her horror, that the lady next door, whose intimate acquaintance she had not the courtesy of, was exactly in the line of her vision in the next yard and that she wore a blue ribbon on her hair!
