Thursday, December 4, 1890.

James E. Boyd, the democratic governor elect of Nebraska, has been notified by John Powers, the Farmers Alliance candidate, that his (Boyd's) election will be contested.

It seems a little queer to those not familiar with modern methods of advertising that the newspapers should all be full of the horrors of Stanley's rear column in Africa just as that gentleman is beginning a lecture tour in this country.

We are of the opinion that it is entirely too soon to choose the next president of the United States. There is a good deal of work to be done before July, 1892.

Something certainly ought to be done to prevent Wall street gambling disturbing the entire financial system of the country whenever certain individuals desire it.

Bob Ingersoll is called an infidel, but the following beautiful sentences which fell from his lips a few days ago lead one to believe that his case is not altogether hopeless.

Since July Secretary Windom has put out $25,000,000 by the purchase of bonds and the prepayment of interest. This was done in order to relieve the money stringency in Wall street, the abode of the greatest gambling scheme on earth.

The expenses for the year in the administration of the United States have been large and in all probability a deficit of about $75,000,000 will be starting the people in the face at the end of the year.

The secretary of the treasury sent to congress Monday the following estimate of expenses of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1892:

Legislative establishment, 3,389,632; Executive establishment, 21,466,104; Judicial establishment, 468,100; Foreign intercourse, 1,742,505; Military establishment, 29,169,951; Naval establishment, 22,568,204; Indian affairs, 6,846,900; Pensions, 155,283,085; Public works, 19,801,704; Postal service, 560,862; Permanent annual appropriations, 122,476,308.

The elections of this year, while widening the field of choice for a democratic president, have not diminished the importance of the electoral vote of New York to the democratic party.

It is scarcely within the range of possibilities that a democratic president can be elected in 1892 without the vote of New York.

The causes which produced the swift and astonishing revolution in the elections this year will not exist—at least in the same degree of potency—two years hence.

The democratic party will need New York's vote in that election to make the victory sure and complete.

The Washington correspondent of the Tribune reports, as if with authority, that the majority in the senate will certainly adopt some sort of gag law early in the coming session in order to pass the Force bill and a partisan re-appointment bill.

The senate has got on without a gag law for a hundred years; no reason for a change exists now; except the determination of the party in power, at all costs, to break its will before its lease of power expires.

It ought to be good news to a number of people who are hovering on the edge of prosperity that there is a glut in the horse market, and that the price of horses will soon bring the noble animal within reach of the humbler.

Unless some one gets a corner on equine product, therefore, horseback riding will develop and the family carry-all will become even a common sight that it is upon the roads of our outlying districts.

When horses may be bought for cats and dogs the western plains may be rid of cats and mice and the eastern city may gather roses for his cheeks in the bridge paths of his parks.

Under Parnell's political leadership "those Irish fellows" have grown from a dozen incapables to a potential party that can muster at least ninety fighting members on the floor of the house when they are all out of England's coercion prisons; and for the last ten years they have made themselves so troublesome to every opposing ministry, and especially to the present Unionist "combine," that they have literally made good Mr. Parnell's declaration at the opening of the fight—that, until justice was done to Ireland, that would make it impossible for any party whatsoever to legislate adequately for Great Britain.

REV. DR. TALMAGE PREACHES ABOUT GALILEE.

Full Report of the Brooklyn Divine's Latest Sermon in the Series Descriptive of His Trip Through the Land Where Jesus Lived and Died.

It is Monday morning in our Palestine experience, and the sky is a leaden gray above, as in the book we call the blue Galilee beneath.

Its white satin clads is among the snows of Mount Hermon where the Jordan starts, and its sepulcher is the Dead Sea into which the Jordan empties.

As sometimes a beautiful child in a neighborhood has a half dozen pet names, and some of her neighbors call her by one name and others by another, so this pet lake of the planet has a profusion of names.

Of the two hundred and thirty war ships Josephus mentioned on these waters—four thousand in all—there remains not one piece of a hull, or one patch of a canvas, or one splinter of an oar.

With a common saw and hammer and ax many of you could make a better one than the ancient mariners who were pelted down to their ears, and as they always do in rowing, stand away from shore.

Let the boat, as far as possible and not run aground, hug the western shore of the lake that we call the sea of Galilee.

Side by side are the two great characters of this lake region, Jesus and Herod Antipas. And did any age produce any such antipodes, any such antitheses, any such opposites?

shot any one and have no ambition to be shot, I said: "Let us stay by the western shore." "No," he said, "I will go to the hills of Gadar, on the other side, down which two thousand swine after being possessed by the devil run into the lake, and bringing down the devil with them."

The father, Chuzza, the Herodian courtier, worn out with anxiety as well as by the rapid journey to and from Cana, is soon in a fitful unconscience. Joanna was a Christian before, but I warrant she was more of a Christian afterward.

Do not mix up this case with the angry discussions about Christian science, but accept the doctrine, as old as the Bible, that God does answer prayer for the sick.
