

Looking Backward

Many a firm that never gave such an expenditure a serious thought a few years ago, now counts its Newspaper Advertising appropriation as one of its most necessary (and most profitable) outlays. Is there a hint here for you?

The Telephone-Register.

Looking Forward

Many a firm that now says, "there is nothing in Newspaper Advertising for us," will find within the next few years that they have been much in it for others in the same line. Is not now your opportunity?

SOME ECCENTRIC PEERS.
NOBLE IN NAME, NOT IN FACT: A PARODY.

Individuals Who Deprive England's Most Venerable Institution of Popular Respect—The Sad Decay of Feudalism.

The eccentric nobleman is well to the fore just at the present in England. He has taken to amusing the mob, late racing against time on the public highway. Today at Tattershall's I heard that young Lord Rosslyn had made a bet with Lord Headley that he would eat two pounds of steak and drink a gallon of ale in less than time it takes Lord Headley to kill and skin a bullock. Rather a promising exhibition this.

AMPUTATING INSANITY.
IS IDIOCY CURABLE BY SURGERY OR NOT.

A Promising Invention. A recent invention promises to be more far-reaching in its immediate practical results than any which has preceded it in the annals of mechanical discovery. It consists in the use of hardened steel ball bearings for all wheels, pulleys, or revolving shafts, with a view to accelerating and increasing friction to a minimum and almost unappreciable quantity. The bicycle system of bearings furnishes an illustration of the principle but with only partial and imperfect adaptation. Here the defects of the latter are remedied, and the principle given such large and apparently illimitable scope as to foreshadow what may not inaptly be termed the millennium of mechanical art. The pulleys which have been in operation at the power house of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company for several weeks have demonstrated to the satisfaction of a great number of scientific and practical men, many of them attendants upon the late patent office and others of high and authoritative standing in the government department that the abolition of friction which has long been the dream of a multitude of original thinkers, is finally an accomplished fact. Two of the mentioned have been in use for three weeks carrying the railway cable, requiring no attention, generating no heat, and performing their work admirably in all respects. Two other pulleys have been running for about ten days and twelve hours a day merely for exhibition, one of which is driven with a thread of No. 200 spool cotton to speed of 1200 revolutions a minute, without any oil or other lubricant and absolutely without heating. The plane surfaces that are exposed to the bearings and the bearings themselves being at no time raised above the normal temperature of cold steel. It is thus conclusively shown that where no heat is developed there is no friction, and if no friction there is no wear. The substantial merits of this new motive appliance are apparent to all who have observed its operations. The simplicity of the principle involved is so obvious that a child can understand it; the success of its application is so conclusive and unanswerable as to disarm criticism. Spherical bearings, that present to a plain surface but one point of contact are practically indestructible by attrition. Experiment has shown that when of proper material and construction that they cannot be worn away or out of shape. To the applicability of an invention that thus virtually annihilates friction, dispels heat, and does away with the use of lubricating oils there is no limit. It can be applied to all machinery and to the wheels of railway cars as for the pulleys that support the cables. It has already been successfully introduced in the running gear of ordinary vehicles, to the great saving of horse-power and entire relief from the annoyance and unsightliness of the grease that is now the common disfigurement of carriage-axles.—Washington Post.

TIME'S REVENGE.
The Fate of Gen Miguel Lopez, Who Betrayed the Emperor Maximilian.

It is now fully a quarter of a century since a mercurial prodigy so clouded the Emperor Maximilian's mind that she was spared a single pang of grief when her royal husband was slaughtered in Mexico.

For nearly a generation the widow of the unfortunate Maximilian has remained in ignorance of his fate. But slowly, and by almost imperceptible degrees, her mind has become clarified, and she is once more in the enjoyment of her faculties. Looking backward through the long years of darkness, that sad Mexican business in which she played the part of a heroine seems to her a happy dream. It is well that it is so. Carlotta is not an old woman. She is hardly forty-five, and something in her future may compensate her for her bitter past.

But the same day that her recovery was announced also brought the intelligence that Gen. Miguel Lopez had been bitten by a mad dog and was under the Pasteur treatment.

This Lopez was the trusted officer who betrayed Maximilian to his blood-thirsty enemies—the wretch whose evil work caused Carlotta's insanity. After living all these long years despised even by his own countrymen, and scorned by his wife for his treason, he has perhaps met his doom.

What fate would be more fitting for this false friend, who sold his benefactor? It is hard to believe that he will be cured. He will snarl and snarl and foam at the mouth like a rabid dog. He will live in his paroxysms of maniacal frenzy. He will tear his flesh in his mad convulsions and die like a wild beast.

Time brings its revenge. As the traitor Lopez sinks out of sight in the lurid shadows now descending upon him, his victim Carlotta comes once more into the light of day, serene, happy, and, once more herself, the most charming woman that has worn a crown since Eugene in her happiest days. Dissolving views—lights and shadows—they make up life!

Eugene's Limited Education.
The Empress Eugenia, though naturally intelligent, was in some respects extremely ignorant. Educated as were the high-born young Spanish girls of her generation—that is to say, not educated at all—she was forced all through her palmy days to struggle against this great disadvantage.

She never could learn the art of spelling, and all her private notes and letters are thickly peppered with faults of orthography. She ascended the throne at the age of twenty-six—a period in life rather late for the commencement of one's education. But to her credit be it said, she did her best, by incessant reading, to supplement the defects in her early mental training. She spoke English to perfection, and the emperor and she were wont to converse in that language when they did not want their attendants to know what they were talking about. She was an elegant and fearless horsewoman, and her skill in equestrian was among the first of her accomplishments that attracted the notice of Napoleon III, himself an accomplished rider. But her principal talent was for art, and she drew in crayon exceedingly well.

Barnum's Lucky Partners.

"Barnum made every partner of his rich," said Mr. Kohl, "as well as many of his employees. From 1873 to 1875 W. C. Coup and 'Dan' Costello were his partners and both became wealthy. George Bailey, Nathan and June were his partners from 1875 to 1881. Nathan and Bailey are now capitalists living in New York and June was a very rich woman when he died. James L. Hutchinson and J. A. Bailey were the next of Barnum's partners, the firm being Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson until 1886, when Mr. Bailey's health failed and he sold the interest to W. W. Cole. In 1888 Bailey again purchased the interest of Cole, and together with Barnum, bought Hutchinson out. Since then the firm has been Barnum & Bailey. Without exception all these men have become rich from their association with Barnum. He was accustomed to say: 'I don't need my partner's money; I need their work and management, and I want them to be with the show every day and give it their undivided attention. Then all they have to do is stand under the edge of my umbrella and the droppings will make them rich.'"

The Duke of Hamilton can be recognized a mile off by his clothes. They are always of the same pattern—very loud check, very baggy trousers, very short coat and a pot hat. He usually has a dozen silks made on the same lines, color and pattern at the same time, and he regularly whenever it is possible, changes his garments in the middle of the day.

When driving a four-in-hand he is in the habit of stepping into the inside of the coach for a few minutes and changing his clothes before resuming the reins, says the Philadelphia Press. Of course he wears black things at night, but otherwise his wardrobe may be regarded as one of the most peculiar in civilization.

Lord Lisle insists upon smoking a short clay pipe in the street. He is an Irish peer and not very well off. His dining room walls are covered with colored clay pipes arranged in stars and crosses, all of which—over 500—have been smoked by his lordship. It is said that he would have been elected a representative peer of Ireland but for the fact that his brother nobles were afraid that he would disgrace the sacred body of coronets by smoking his clay pipe on the terrace of the house of lords.

Lord Gardner, fourth baron of his title, is one of the few English peers who not only declines to live in his own country, but go out of their way to un-Anglicize themselves by eccentric foreign marriages. This nobleman lives all the year round in India, and his baroness is a daughter of Prince Mirza Shikoo, a grandson of the late King of Delhi. She is a coffee-colored lady, and enjoys her betel-nut as thoroughly as a Nauth girl. Her lord's household is similar to that of Indian Rajahs.

Lord Newburgh point blank declines to be either an Englishman or a Scotchman, although he is the tenth peer of his title. He is an Italian citizen, who calls himself Count Bandini—perhaps the only instance on record where a man prefers being an Italian count to an English earl. Viscount Taaffe, an Irish peer, positively refuses to be an Irishman after his description. He and his father before him were naturalized Austrians, and the country has agreed so well with him that he has risen to the rank of prime minister to the Emperor Franz Josef. He calls himself a count—Count Taaffe.

But you have an instance of renunciation of citizenship as well as citizenship, in Dr. Contee Fairfax, of Virginia, who, as is well known, is eleventh Baron Fairfax in the peerage of Scotland; but he finds it, however, to be a greater honor to be a citizen of the United States.

Disgraced and blackguard peers are now quite a strong body in England. One of the Irish earls who was a corporal in the Life Guards before he succeeded to his title did six months' hard labor for some breach of military discipline. Another peer, an English noble, and the son of a Lord High Chancellor, can never show his face in the house of lords again. He committed a disgusting crime. He has dropped his title and is now clerk to a firm of auctioneers in Australia. The marquis of Ailsbury still affects his comestronger suit on odd occasions and likes to bet that he can sell a barrow of greens as quickly as any hawkier in Whitechapel. By the way, it is interesting to note in the peerage for 1891 that the marchioness once known as Dolly Tester now figures as Dorothy Julia, daughter of T. Hasely Esq. Testes's papa was an unmitigated ruffian of the toughest tribe as England has ever produced.

That cheerful gentleman who is best known as earl of Belfast, and is now marquis of Donegal, has reformed. He no longer gets drunk in public houses or indulges in any other of the eccentric freaks which gained him such an extraordinary reputation; but then old age is creeping upon him and his once splendid physique is a wreck. The duke of Manchester, till lately Lord Mansfield, has not been heard of publicly since he succeeded in the higher title, and hopes are being entertained that he may yet prove worthy of his country's pride. Of the rest of England's proud nobility how little can be said to explain why they should remain England's hereditary rulers. One of the biggest of the lot of them, the duke of Bedford, committed the vulgar act of suicide a month or two ago; another, the earl of Devon, inheritor of the proud honors of the house of Courtney, died, an undischarged bankrupt; the smallest deposit ever made in this city was that of Postmaster Jewett who the other day placed one cent to a special account of a Comanche county postmaster in the Wichita National bank, in his quarterly settlement with the department which he duly notified of the credit made. The second assistant postmaster-general will notify the auditor of the treasury, and in turn will demand a receipt from the treasurer of the United States at New York, who will send this receipt in triplicate to the postmaster-general, the treasurer of the United States and the Comanche county postmaster. Great is the circumlocution office!

Progress of the South.

Superintendent of the Census Porter has given some points of the wonderful progress of the South during the last decade. The South now produces as much coal, iron ore and pig-iron as the entire United States produced in 1870. The output in the coal-producing States of the South in 1890 was more than twice the entire output of bituminous coal in the United States in 1860, and nearly 2,000,000 more tons than the total production of the United States in 1870. The only one of these states producing pig-iron in 1860 and 1870 was Tennessee. The entire production of those states in 1890 was 297,000 tons which had in 1860 increased to nearly 2,600,000 tons. The production of iron ore in these States now almost equals the total production of the United States in 1870. Then the whole country produced 3,365,800 tons, while in 1890 the production of the nine iron ore producing States was 2,917,529 tons. The South produces about three-fourths of the world's cotton crop, but only manufactures about 7 or 8 per cent of what it raises. The agricultural products in 1889 were over $250,000,000 greater than in 1879, and the value of the live stock was $17,000,000 greater. The railroads increased from 20,612 miles in 1880 to 40,521 in 1890.

A Bright Campaign Speaker.
Perhaps the brightest campaign speeches made during the municipal campaign from which Chicago has just emerged were those delivered by the Rev. Dr. P. S. Henson. So popular did this gentleman become that when he once began talking his auditors did not want to let him stop talking. At one of the meetings last week Dr. Henson referred to the objections made in certain quarters to his participation in politics. "I am told," said he, "that I don't know anything about party organization, and that therefore I don't know anything about politics and should have nothing to do with it. Now, I don't know how to make eggs, yet my judgment as to the merits or demerits of an egg is worth more than that of all the hens of the world. And I tell you, fellow-citizens, this man Cregier is a bad egg!"

Highest of all in Lathering Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Novelties in Cremation Urns.
The latest craze is to order one's cremation urn, and use it as an ornament till it should happen to be wanted. All the large china shops confess to having had several orders lately, while silversmiths have been equally favored. An enthusiastic "cremationist" of my acquaintance has a couple of delightful little old silver urns which ornaments his sideboard, and should any guest happen to admire, they are told that those are for their host's ashes, which are to be divided and sent to two old valued friends in these fascinating little cases. Some are even made in gold, while the more ordinary urns, which instead of adorning the dining-room, are for the present used as pot-pourris, are of Derby stoneware, the same material as old-fashioned "toby" jars.

The Zalluski pneumatic has been tested at Shoeburyness, England, with marked success. At 4000 yards range six projectiles were thrown into a rectangular target 2½ x 1½ yards in size.

THE REV. Geo. H. Thayer (Boston Ind.) says: "Both myself and wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure, Sold by Rogers Bros."

That Hackling Cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy. We guarantee it. Sold by Howarth and Co.

THE LATEST CRUISE TO ORDER ONE'S CREMATION URN, AND USE IT AS AN ORNAMENT TILL IT SHOULD HAPPEN TO BE WANTED. ALL THE LARGE CHINA SHOPS CONFESS TO HAVING HAD SEVERAL ORDERS LATELY, WHILE SILVERSMITHS HAVE BEEN EQUALLY FAVORED. AN ENTHUSIASTIC "CREMATIONIST" OF MY ACQUAINTANCE HAS A COUPLE OF DELIGHTFUL LITTLE OLD SILVER URNS WHICH ORNAMENTS HIS SIDEBBOARD, AND SHOULD ANY GUEST HAPPEN TO ADMIRE, THEY ARE TOLD THAT THOSE ARE FOR THEIR HOST'S ASHES, WHICH ARE TO BE DIVIDED AND SENT TO TWO OLD VALUED FRIENDS IN THESE FASCINATING LITTLE CASES. SOME ARE EVEN MADE IN GOLD, WHILE THE MORE ORDINARY URNS, WHICH INSTEAD OF ADORNING THE DINING-ROOM, ARE FOR THE PRESENT USED AS POT-PURRIS, ARE OF DERBY STONWARE, THE SAME MATERIAL AS OLD-FASHIONED "TOBY" JARS.
