TEMPORARILY DETHRONED.

The contest over the governorship of Nebraska has been decided by the state supreme court in favor of Mr. Thayer, who was the governor last term. The ground upon which this decision was reached is that Mr. Boyd, the democratic candidate, is not a citizen of the state or of the United States. He came to this country with his parents at the age of nine years. The father declared his intention to become a citizen and was recognized as such from that time. The son has always enjoyed the privileges and performed the duties of a citizen since his majority. But the court holds that it was necessary for the son to take out his second papers upon becoming of age, thus reversing the decision of the lower court. Mr. Boyd's claim to citizenship and to the office of governor is based on a law passed by congress that all residents of a territory become citizens of the United States when said territory is admitted into the Union. And upon this point it is expected that the national supreme court will reverse the decision of the state court, which by the way was rendered under peculiar circumstances, there not being a full attendance of the judges and the absence not being allowed to see the writ before it was issued.

TABERNALE PULPIT.

DR. TALMAGE PREACHES A SERMON ON THE MENDING OF NETS.

Christians Should Look to It That Their Nets for Souls Are Kept in Good Order—Some Hints That Will Be of Value.

BROOKLYN, May 17.—If proof of Dr. Talmage's immense popularity had been needed, it would be amply furnished by the promptitude with which the people have availed themselves of the increased accommodation afforded by the new Tabernacle. The vast edifice is as densely crowded at every service as the older and smaller Tabernacle. Dr. Talmage this morning preached a sermon on "The Mending of Nets," and as usual gave sound practical advice to both parties. His text was Matthew 13, "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a net that was cast abroad in the sea, and gathered together of all kinds, and when it was full, they drew it up, and they sat down, and they gathered together the good into vessels, but the bad they cast away."

At least eight hundred million net in the world's waters, and such a vast ocean of opportunity there is room for all the nets and all the boats and all the fishermen and for millions more.

There is a story between churches. Each one does a work peculiar to itself. There should be no rivalry between ministers. God never repeats himself, and he never makes two ministers alike, and each one has a work that no other man in the universe can accomplish. "I go fishing," cried Simon Peter to his comrades, and he never makes two fishermen alike, and each one has a work that no other man in the universe can accomplish. "I go fishing," cried Simon Peter to his comrades, and he never makes two fishermen alike, and each one has a work that no other man in the universe can accomplish.

ABOUT TIN.

In his speech at Metropolitan Hall Mr. Wilson devoted special attention to the subject of tin plate. It was well he did so, for there is a concerted effort to deceive the public with regard to the effects of the new duties. The New York Tribune has the assurance to say by implication, although it is careful not to assert directly, that the American market has so far been filled by Welsh factories to shut down. Another common assertion is that in view of the competition the price of Welsh tin plate has been reduced.

Both of these statements are pure invention from the ground up, without even a skeleton of facts to build on. The truth is that there is no evidence as yet that any tin plate has been made in this country in commercial quantities. The authors of the tin job in the McKinley bill have not developed their plan of campaign, so that we can not say with certainty whether they intend to pocket the new bounty by importing Welsh labor and actually making tin plate to sell at 22 cents a pound more than it is worth, or whether they merely intend to use the tax as a club to force people into using the patented galvanized iron and granite ware which has already made millions of the men who control its manufacture. Whichever course may be adopted, we may be sure that the trusts will make a good thing out of it.

At present it is the hardest imaginable thing to get a glimpse of a piece of American tin plate, except at a protective League banquet. Recently postal cards headed "Hurrah for McKinley," were circulated through the East, offering in a business-like way to sell certain grades of American tin plate at foreign prices. A New York Evening Post reporter visited the specified address and expressed the desire to buy a few boxes of tin plates. The suspicious gentleman who constituted the entire visible establishment asked him who he was, where he came from, what he wanted the goods for, and finally refused either to sell or to tell him where his factory was situated. Subsequent investigation disclosed the fact that the factory consisted of one room, in which an old man and boy gave Welsh tin plates a second coating of tin to turn them into a naturalized American product suitable for distribution as McKinley souvenirs.

So far as the claim that American tin plate is filling the American market is concerned, the official figures published by the Republican Administration afford a ready and conclusive refutation of it. In the month of March, we imported 48,699,428 pounds of foreign tin plates. In March, 1890, we imported 101,174,507 pounds. In the nine months ending with March, 1890, our imports were 505,798,577 pounds, and in the nine months ending with March, 1891, they were 624,919,264 pounds. The unprecedented importations in March of this year have been exceeded by those in April, for which the official returns are not yet at hand.

The same figures dispose of the assertion that the price has been reduced by the prospect of American competition. The 48,699,428 pounds imported in March, 1890, were valued at $1,561,774, or 3.2 cents a pound. The 101,174,507 pounds imported in March, 1891, were valued at $8,646,509, or 3.6 cents a pound. We bought over twice as many pounds, and paid an eighth more for every pound. This extra price, of course went to the Welsh tin-merchants. The fact is that our people are buying themselves up for a season of famine. Up to the 1st of July, when the new tax goes into effect, the imports will keep on increasing, stock will be laid in for six months or a year ahead, and the Welsh will get better and better prices. After that there will be dull times in the tin plate business for everybody.—Exchange.

TWO PICTURES.

The New York Press has a way of publishing what it calls "tariff pictures." It finds a case in which there has been progress in this country in spite of the tariff, and then it draws a diagram to illustrate the blessings of protection. One of the latest of these works of statistical high art is this:

In 1880 the value of the manufactured products of the United States was over $5,000,000,000.

In 1890 it had increased to over $8,000,000,000.

This shows what a decade of protection has done for our industries. There happens to be no patent on this kind of logic. For instance:

In 1850 the value of our manufactured goods was $1,019,107,616.

In 1890 it had increased to $1,885,861,676.

This shows what a decade of low tariff did for our industries.

Here is another pair of brand new tariff pictures for the gallery of our New York contemporary:

Exports of domestic products in 1850, $134,000,233.

Exports of domestic products in 1890, $278,304,080.

Increase in nine years of low tariff, over 100 per cent.

Exports of domestic products in 1880, $823,946,353.

Exports of domestic products in 1890, $730,282,960.

Decrease in nine years of high tariff, about 12 per cent.

There are plenty more pictures of the same kind where these came from.

THE BOYS VINDICATED.

William Merchant not long ago sued the board of trustees of Monmouth college for damages for expelling young men alleged to have been guilty of conduct unbecoming gentlemen. Quite a scandal was connected with the affair and it created much talk and comment at the college. The boys have been vindicated, the jury awarding $50 damages. The trial occupied four days in the Polk county circuit court and the verdict seemed to give general satisfaction. Mr. Merchant brought suit solely to clear the young men of the blot cast upon their names, and now that the matter is settled, peace will doubtless reign supreme at the normal school.
