T. T. Geer could be fittingly called a running Geer.

An eastern man remarked to us yesterday: "This is the grandest country under the sun." We found that out seven years ago.

While Blaine was a member of Garfield's cabinet war was in progress between Chili and Peru. The American secretary sought to restore peace and mitigate the consequences of the crushing defeat sustained by Peru. This is no doubt remembered by Chili, and governs their actions to a considerable extent in the present negotiations.

Palmer & Rey, in their September Pacific Printer, published a number of testimonials on their patent outside. They hail from the state of Washington and are from small papers which probably "work" about fifteen quires. There is not a representative paper in the list.

Some European correspondents predict a revolution in Russia as the outcome of the famine. A Russian revolution would be a terrible affair. A vast majority of the people are in a very low state of civilization. Obedience to the czar is their principal rule of conduct. If they feel themselves absolved from that it is not easy to imagine to what lengths they may not go.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat quite truthfully points out that if war with Chili should take place it would be fought on the Pacific and not on the Atlantic coast. If the Chilians should get a chance and have the nerve to take the offensive, their attacks would be against the California and Oregon ports, and not those on the other side of the continent. The chances for the warships is now in the Pacific ocean, and not in the Brooklyn navy-yards.

While the victory in the east at the late elections belongs to the democratic party, it should be remembered that too much confidence is not good for victors. While almost defeated, the republican party still has elements of strength in its cherished trusts fostered by its great tariff. It also controls the offices of the country and when properly handled these contribute millions to the working fund. The democrats have plenty to do before 1892 and they had better be up and doing.

The French senate has voted to admit American pork at a duty of 45 per cent. A pretty stiff protection for the native hog. The chamber of deputies has still to act upon the matter. The protection organ here, whose editor is minister to France, and who has been very persistent and skillful in seeking to secure the removal of the embargo, expresses the hope that before long France will reduce this duty. But why? If high protection is a good policy for the United States why is it not also good for France? And if the foreigner pays the duty—the foreigner in this case being the American farmer—why need France concern herself to lower the duties? The logic of protection is a very queer thing.—World.

Spars of Oregon pine are to be put into the U. S. Cruiser Philadelphia, now being overhauled at the Brooklyn navy yard, replacing the steel ones now in use. The three steel masts now in use in the Philadelphia weigh upwards of 25 tons and cost over $32,000, while the pine masts will weigh about 2 tons and cost less than $500. The lower masts are Oregon yellow pine sticks 20 inches in diameter and 60 feet long. The top masts are each 10 inches in diameter and 30 feet long. Steel masts have been given a thorough trial and the return to wooden spars by the navy means a great deal for the prosperity of timber owners on the Pacific coast, whose forests are vast reserves of timber particularly adapted for that purpose.—The Timberman.

AS THEY SEE IT.

It is suggested that Prof. Fork now catch on to the tail end of the theosophist craze. It is the biggest fool agitation now on earth.—Statesman.

There is much criticism, all over this county, upon the action of Judge Boise in letting two young men off with a fine of $150 each on conviction of grand larceny in stealing six beef cattle. Grand larceny is almost on a par with assault and battery.—Ledger.

If the papers of eastern Oregon will urge a special session of the legislature we have no doubt Gov. Penney will accede to the wishes of the people in that regard. The press of the Inland Empire should be a unit in this regard and the desired object can be accomplished.—Times-Mountaineer.

We have no objection to Mr. Geer as a man personally, but we do think that Mr. Herrmann is preeminently better fitted for congressman for the first congressional district of Oregon, than he. The Salem Journal wants Geer. His wants are great, however, and its "precepts come in slow."—West Side.

Oregon protectionists don't point to the woolen mills at Oregon City to illustrate the beneficial workings of a protective tariff. The price of the commodities manufactured at this concern has been increased, while the wages of the employes have been met with a corresponding decrease. Under protection the laborer gets left every time.—Wicome.

One of the most amusing things to a newspaper man is to see a man who never subscribes, standing in the street waiting for the carrier to deliver the paper on a business counter, when he is the first to step up and want to borrow it, then sit for an hour or two reading it, throw it down with an air of disgust and put on a miserable face and declare there's nothing it.—Lebanon Express.

The leper case at the McKenzie bridge has caused considerable comment. The unfortunate man who is the victim of the disease deserves little sympathy. Aware of his condition and the disease that had fastened itself upon him, he was willing to link an innocent girl's life with his own with the probability of entailing the horrible disease on her and the offspring of the marriage.—Eugene Guard.

We are always modest in our claims for Newberg, but we doubt if there is a town in Oregon that can show a better per cent of growth of a substantial character than ours will foot up for the past year. The building that has been done has cost money, is of a substantial character, and a credit to the town. Whatever may be done in the future this has been a good season's work.—Graphic.

Last spring it was estimated that twenty houses would be built here in the coming season; the number is over thirty. Now it is thought the number for the coming year will reach well on to one hundred. And there's talk of new business that will revitalize in the spring. The electric lights and the improved waterworks will be important factors in our surely coming growth.—Monmouth Democrat.

An excellent institution, or one that may and should become one, has lately been opened for occupants near Salem. This is the reform school for young offenders and incorrigibles. Under wise and able management, many a youth will thus be saved from a life of crime and an ending of his career in the penitentiary among hardened criminals, or on the gallows. The state has not done a better job in years than the provision of this institution. It is hoped and expected that it will be the means of doing much good.—Telegram.

Nobody ever supposed that the state passage and around the Cascades was built as a speculation, or expected it to pay a dividend into the state treasury. If it shall accomplish the object of reducing rates from the interior, it will not matter whether it does any business or not. So long as the people around the Dalles sell their wheat for within 2 cents of the Portland price, neither they nor any one else need care how it gets to market. The Dalles merchants seem to be taking care of the opposition steamboat line.—Oregonian.

The tree-planting exercise, which was held at the high school yesterday, has a lesson in it which is of more value than may be devined by the casual observer. The establishment of arbor days in this and many other states of the Union which are celebrated by school children may have a far-reaching influence and will have, if properly directed. The American idea of destructiveness has received much impetus by the cutting down and burning up of forest trees, and it is highly proper that it should be given a turn in the way of building up and preserving. Many of the older eastern states now see the folly of forest destruction, but when wood and lumber was plenty, as it is now in this country, they gave no thought to the possibility of it becoming scarce. If an occasional tree-planting exercise does no more than cultivate a disposition for building up and preserving, or, at least, for preventing unnecessary waste of our resources, it will accomplish a good deal of good.—Portland Dispatch.

FUNNY, BUT WAIT

The newspapers of Chili attempt to be sarcastic, as the following translation of Chilian wit which appeared in El Combate, the principal paper in Chili, will show:

RAILWAY BUILDING IN 1891.

The Chicago Railway Age says that "from returns now received we find that up to October 1, there were laid in 1891 in the United States alone 2,829 miles upon 186 different lines. Georgia is still in the lead, having added almost 300 miles on 12 different roads. Washington comes second, with 182 miles on 12 lines, and Pennsylvania follows with 171 miles on the 17 roads. South Carolina reports 177 miles, Alabama, 159 miles, Virginia 132 miles, and North Carolina and Tennessee each nearly 100 miles, showing that the activity which has for some time characterized the central southern states is still continuing. There is work in increasing railway facilities going on the middle western states, Minnesota building 96 miles on five lines. The only states which report no additions are Vermont, Connecticut, Delaware, Mississippi and Nevada. Kansas, in which railway building was kept up at a tremendous rate for several years, has but two miles. Although three months are left in which track-laying will be increased the total for 1891 will fall below 5000 miles. The yearly addition of new track has not fallen as low as 5000 miles since 1885, but in that year it was less than 2,000, and in 1884 was less than 4,000 miles, while in the series of six years from 1873 to 1878, inclusive, the greatest year's work was less than 4,000.

Last Sunday the men employed in the navy yards of the United States worked for the first time on Sunday since the war. The trouble with Chili was the cause of it. The government is fitting every warship it has for the sea, and while it will not be the largest navy afloat, and not as large as the one owned by Chili, the power that tackles it for a fight had better look out. American grit goes a long way in a fight and an American seaman is not out of it until the whole shebang is beneath the water. While it would not be advisable to have a row now, the respect due the flag must be forthcoming from the little fourth rate power of the southern continent.

The Roseburg Plaindealer got the news of the young man who made a fool of himself there by objecting to a wedding from the Statesman, and printed it about three days after the event. It is the sort of a paper that wants to be "protected" by a press association. A newspaper that publishes the news and does business on a business principles doesn't need any protection from anybody.—Statesman.

But still the Statesman howls for the protection of the people. The argument from business view is right and should be applied to the United States.

The First Commitment.

The first young evil doer amenable to the Oregon state reform school. He is from Portland and his name is Lewis Weiss. He is 14 years of age and was committed from Portland by Judge Stearns at the request of his father, Lewis Weiss, Sr. The wayward lad seemed anxious to be sent to the reformatory. This state institution was opened to the reception of students on the 5th inst. and it will no doubt not be many weeks until there are several dozen lads in its care. Boys between the ages of 8 and 16 years are admitted.

Some years ago the republic of Chili had the power to drive the United States navy from the sea. It is now considerably better off so far as a navy is concerned. It makes the average American's eyes snap when he thinks that a country with a population of less than 3,000,000 is able to build a country containing 65,000,000 people, at bay on the seas. The niggardly policy of the past we are glad to see is a thing of the past and we are slowly growing a navy proportionate to our importance.

"My daughter was greatly troubled with scrofula, and, at one time, it was feared she would lose her sight. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has completely restored her health, and her eyes see as well and strong as ever, with not a trace of scrofula in her system."—Geo. King, Killingly, Conn.
