Dr. Hammond asks "Have we two brains?" It would be a surprise to find that some people have one.

The Behring sea matter has been taken out of the U. S. court and will be tried by arbitration. This is by far the greatest question of the day and Americans await the result with much impatience.

A preacher recently said that a newspaper that told the truth, and the whole truth, couldn't be a pecuniary success. Correct; and the minister who will at all times and under any circumstances tell the whole truth about his members, alive or dead, might not occupy the pulpit more than one Sunday and in some cases might find it convenient to leave town.

It is now stated, apparently on good authority, that war in Europe cannot be postponed beyond next spring. Russia is said to have massed ninety per cent. of her army on the frontiers of Germany, Austria and Rumania, the number being given as 650,000 men.

It is difficult to believe that Russia is so foolhardy as to undertake a war with three great powers arrayed against her, besides Turkey. The latter is no mean antagonist herself when it comes to war with her hereditary enemy.

England will hardly take an active part in the conflict, unless to protect Constantinople from capture by the czar's forces. The outcome of the war will probably be that Russia will be worse beaten than she was in the Crimean war, while Constantinople, the coveted prize, will be farther than ever from her grasp.

A short time ago the people of Brazil thought that they could rule themselves and thereupon deposed kind old Don Pedro, the Emperor, and started in to do the governing. The country has since been in a state of constant turmoil and the lack of governing ability on the part of the people is very evident indeed.

Don Pedro had the ability to rule and was doing all in his power for the future of his country. Brazil advanced more under his kindly hand than it ever will while it is filled with the germs of revolution and personal aggrandizement. The presidents elected want to ruin the country, at least they want to have all its wealth.

While we do not believe in one man rule, in this case it is far better for the people, than the attempt to govern themselves.

We always hear of the people whom speculation makes rich, but seldom are we told of the misery of those whom it makes poor. The land speculative craze is one of the things which bind the limbs of the industrial slave; a thorn in the flesh of the business man, and one of the burdens on the shoulders of the oppressed laborer.

It is simply a form of gambling, as vicious as any other kind, but nevertheless we do not think the evil of it can or should be remedied by a law prohibiting it, but by perfecting and simplifying the systems of taxation. Greater intelligence is the only thing that will positively stamp out evil. The ignorant are always vicious.

For the life of us we never could see why ordinary gambling was prohibited by law while speculation in land and other things was encouraged by the people, the church and the state.—East Oregonian.

AS THEY SEE IT.

The price of wheat and the rate of county taxes do not jibe—wheat sometimes goes up; taxes are ever in the climbing mood. What often goes down, but taxes do not.—Woodburn Independent.

The Roseburg and Coos bay railroad will be built beyond a doubt, and next year will see the work of construction actively pushed toward the Umpqua valley. It means our redemption from Southern Pacific thralldom.—Roseburg Review.

The Southern Pacific railroad would find that the building of branch lines, "feeder," in Oregon would pay better than the requirement of such lines in California. This is a growing state, and it is capable of more solid growth and development than any other state in the union. Nothing will help this growth so much as railroads into the undeveloped corners.—Statesman.

It will be in order for Dr. Rowland to score Dr. Harry for miserable condition of the locks at the insane asylum. The crazy man Chenoweth, who was captured here Saturday, had in his possession the handle of an ordinary spoon with which he had unlocked his door and gained his liberty. Of course such carelessness must be the fault of some one, presumably Dr. Lane.—Graphic.

People are not climbing over each other to see who will reach the canvassers for the world's fair fund first. In fact the canvassers will have to hustle if they secure money enough to pay hotel bills and travelling expenses. The McKinley bill has not yet unlocked the hearts and purses of Oregonians. They are probably waiting to find out if a tariff is a tax. If it is the d— they may take the whole business—fair and all.—Wetcom.

The Oregon democracy could not follow a better plan next year than to nominate a candidate for United States senator to fill the vacancy that will ensue at the expiration of Senator Dolph's term. We believe that with a nomination of that kind Sylvester Penney would carry the legislature. His popularity with the people is unquestioned, and they would remember his unswerving integrity and true devotion to their interests.—Eugene Guard.

What is advancing in price in a most satisfactory manner, and the rumors of wars in Europe, if they develop into actual facts in that direction, would indicate that the wheat market will remain good through the next season also, for war means high prices always. The war rumors are getting thick all around, and it makes one tremble to see the ferocious preparations being carried on to butcher human beings. What a monster of cruelty and hatred man is anyhow.—Albany Herald.

If all signs do not fail the tariff question will be the issue of the next presidential campaign. The silver question may in some localities form a side issue, but as some men in both parties believe in free coinage while others do not, that question cannot be much of an issue. Let the contest be made directly to the point in question between the two parties and have no kick to make at the winning side. In this greatest of countries there should be no fault found with a question carried by a majority.—Newport News.

The robbers who held up the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad in Wisconsin yesterday made a clean $100,000, and their were only six or seven engaged in the affair. This is very encouraging to the profession (?) and no doubt other trains will be overhauled in quick succession. In this age of the world any such lucrative vocation will have many followers. It pays better than law, medicine or literature, although it is not as all respectable and very hazardous. No accident policy would hold good if the emergency caused loss or injury to limb, and it is very questionable if life insurance companies would be prompt to pay beneficiaries if death resulted.—Dallas Mountraineer.

The word "Webfoot," as applied to Oregon, is a misnomer, especially since it is generally used as a term of reproach. Many states of our union have more rain than Oregon, and no one ever thinks of calling them "Webfoot." In August 1888, as reported by the U. S. signal service, the rainfall in Louisiana was twenty-two and one-half inches—as much as falls in Oregon in six months. By reference to the signal service reports, which have been published annually for nearly twenty years, it will be seen that the average rainfall of Oregon, one year after another, is not far from thirty-one inches. At Astoria it is seventy-six inches; at Portland, fifty inches; at Roseburg, thirty-four inches; at Ashland twenty-nine. In eastern Oregon the average is considerably less. Altogether, the annual rainfall of this state is its glory; for it gives a certainty of crops, as forty years successive cropping in many localities amply attests, what this means is promotive of good farms, prosperous home builders, successful business men in all the varied departments of life, and the general uplift and progress of our state along all lines cannot be measured by feeble words. Hence, let us don our rubbers, gossamers, mackintoshes, and grasp our umbrellas on falling days, and go forth to our accustomed duties with buoyant step and a determination to succeed in demonstrating to the fullest extent that our Oregon is as fair a land as the sun shines upon.—Forest Grove Times.

THE DISARMAMENT THEORY.

As a theory, the disarmament of the nations of the earth, has many attractions. The idea of peaceful enjoyment of the hard earned treasures of this earth is hard indeed, but, it must be remembered that these same treasures have been obtained by a fight, in which the carter has been pitted against the whole of mankind. Existence on this earth is in fact a fight against death. When the few kindly inclined advance these theories it goes without saying that they have not studied human nature. Probably in the far future mankind will have evolved enough morally, to make this present day dream a reality. As long as it takes force on the part of a nation to be a factor, commercially, amongst the nations, we see no reason why, we, the greatest of them all in sterling worth to mankind, can not be the greatest on the sea as a fighting force and the carrier of goods. It is necessary for this country, provided she wants to be what she easily can be, to have a navy that will command respect from at least two of the greatest maritime powers of the earth. We do not believe in doing things by halves when we have the material and inclination to do everything possible and a little more. Moralists may moralize, and, while probably it will have an effect that can be noticed in the centuries to come, the effect upon the people of today is too small to be noticed and they go on through life according to the custom of the generation in which they were born. Today and the future—of ourselves—are what we should be looking out for and if the present demands a navy, a life destroyer, the greatest on earth, let us by all means have it and have it quickly. Commercially it is a necessity, and the old time fighting qualities of the American have been stirred up so frequently of late, that, through lack of it he has been unable to unload his surplus energy and he now demands it as a heritage which justly belongs to him.

THE CONFEDERATE FLAG.

There is no reason to object to Gen. Palmer's order that Grand Army men shall not march in a procession in which the Confederate flag is carried. If the old Union soldiers object, as they very naturally might, to honoring this emblem, it should not be carried to their offices.

But while there may be a question of the good taste of those who continue to carry the emblem of the lost cause, there is much contempt to be felt and expressed for some of their critics. There are those who assert that the carrying of the confederate flag is the expression of a disloyal spirit. This is not the truth. The old confederate flags awaken memories, but no disloyalty. The men who march under them in these latter days are not enemies of the Union, and he who accuses them of disloyalty is an unpatriotic citizen.

The flag of our once enemies and now brothers might better be folded up and put away, but while they who display it may show bad taste they do not necessarily show bad blood. There are no more patriotic citizens in the country today nor any who would fight quicker or harder for the stars and stripes than the ex-soldiers of the confederacy.—N. Y. World.
