

HOW THE BUD BLOOMED.

HER EDUCATION IN THE WAYS OF SOCIETY.

She Drives to a Picnic with a Young American to the Great Disappointment of an Englishman of Wealth and Position, but Without Youth.

Copyright, 1921, by American Press Association.

EVERY noon after Rose Budd was really out on the summer time...

And her mother put up her Rosette, and moaned with despair, "Sir Willoughby, what can we do with the American girl?"

And Sir Willoughby, with disappointment on his face and a moan in his eye, looked after the ponies as they raced down the road, and answered, "You might as well give her what she wants for, by jove, you know, she'll get it anyhow."

WOMEN'S WAGES AND THEIR EATING. And now they are trying to make out that the cause of low wages among women workers is that they eat less...

There had been a Revolution. In a recent issue of a well known French paper appears the following notice: "M. Blanc begs to state that he was suffering from mental excitement when he published an advertisement stating that he would not be responsible for debts contracted by his wife, who had left his house. He retracts this statement; his wife never left his house and he has absolutely no complaint to make against her."

A Descendant of Pocahontas. Mrs. Theresa J. Freeman, prominent among the literary ladies of Missouri and a leader in the present state fair exhibit for the World's fair of 1893, is a native of Paris, Ky., and seventh in descent from Pocahontas, the Indian princess of history, song and romance.

What Rose said was probably very bad manners, and there was a flash in her cheeks that made you think, when you looked at her eyes, that the red, white and blue of American independence lived in her heart and spoke through her lips, but she announced, "In that case wouldn't it be wiser for the gentleman from England to take some girl that isn't quite so good form and train her in the way she should go?"

old enough to join the National Association of Sons of the Revolution, as their father was a descendant of Captain John Freeman, who fought under Washington's immediate command.

WOMAN'S WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

The Cry for Dress Reform Grows in Strength and Volume.

Business and professional women are gradually making up their minds that we must have dress reform if the movement for the emancipation of women is to go on.

Shirley Dare in speaking of the gracefulness of the modern woman, says: "The Greek athlete or the maiden were not thinking whether they were playing in good form or not. They threw to hit the mark with the least waste of effort, and so moving, so instinctive, were supremely graceful and models for all time."

At Ashland, Pa., is a coal mine with a woman superintendent, Mrs. Frances Woodbridge.

Rev. Mr. Isham, pastor of Grace Methodist church in Lincoln, Neb., says that the present activity among the feminine sex means the "removal of the girth of the old-fashioned woman hand and foot through the centuries."

Margaret Knight invented the machine for the making of the paper bags which are reinforced bottom, now in such common use.

New York has two skillful and successful girl jewelers, Emma and Minnie Schultze, who work in their father's establishment.

Fortune for a Missing Heir. A Scion of a Southern Family Who Was Cut Off for Wedding a Poor Girl. A romantic story of the disinherited son of one of the most aristocratic South Carolina families, which contains the elements of the popular tale of fiction, with the thread of a novel well kept and not a woman was asked to speak.

Chicago will build a home for working girls. There is nothing for which a man has to pay so dear as he does for the privilege of being stingy.
