MYSTERIOUS COUNTESS.

A Woman of the Paris Half-World Who Deceived New York Society.

An absurd incident illustrating the admiration of the American public for titled people and the very curious absence of precaution manifested in the receiving of such persons in the United States, often with no other credentials than their own assertions, has just come to our knowledge. Our informant was a married lady, who has for some years past resided in Paris, and who went with her husband last year to spend a few months in her native land. They made a tour of the watering places during July and August and towards the close of their wanderings they arrived at a summer resort noted for the size and splendor of its hotels. They took up their quarters at the principle one of these hosteries, and when my friend inquired his and her names on the hotel register as "Mr. and Mrs. X—" of Paris," he was instantly asked if he knew the Countess Z—. He was forced to confess that he had never even heard of the lady. Thereupon an immense amount of consideration on the part of the hotel proprietor and his employees was immediately manifested towards him. Not to have known the elegant and fascinating Countess Z— argued that in Paris Mr. and Mrs. X— were themselves unknown and by no means frequented the best society. The charming countess, traveling in company with a young French married couple had just taken her departure with her friends from the hotel aforesaid. She had been overwhelmed with attentions during her stay. The best of carriages, the most sumptuous of restaurants, the most carefully trained of the chambermaids and waiters of the house, were all placed at her service. She was called upon by a number of the villa holders of the place and invited to dinners and afternoon teas, and altogether was made much of. When she went away she took with her a number of letters of introduction from her new acquaintances to prominent families in New York and Boston and promised faithfully that she would not fail to present them. She spoke English remarkably well, an accomplishment that had a good deal to do with her brilliant social success during her stay.

Recovering finally from the shock of being held as social pariahs on account of their lack of acquaintanceship with the elegant lady Mr. and Mrs. X— finished their sojourn at the hotel in question and soon after sailed from New York to return to their Parisian home. A few months after they got back Mr. X— was invited by a French gentleman to accompany him to an entertainment by which a well known and dashing member of the demi-monde was about to inaugurate a new residence of which she had just taken possession. This dame, though a prominent and popular personage by reason of her geniality and good humor and general jollity, is neither young nor handsome, and unlike many of her colleagues, is not in the least refined. She is known by the name of "Margot," and, since the death of Cora Pearl she is probably the most conspicuous woman of her class in Paris. Towards the end of the evening she undertook to amuse the persons surrounding her with an account of a trip she had taken to the United States during the past summer, and of the immense amount of attention and social consideration she had enjoyed during her tour.

"I went by the name of the Countess Z—," continued Margot. My valet and my maid had just got married. So I took them with me as traveling companions, and they, too, passed as French people of high distinction. Look here, here are some of the cards that were left upon me in Boston and New York. Mrs. Blueblood, of Boston got up a reception in my honor. Mrs. Upperton, of New York, gave me a very swell dinner party, and so on without end. I tell you what, girls, if you want to amuse yourselves immensely in the best society, all you have to do is to call yourselves Countess or Marquis and go to the United States. They don't stop to ask embarrassing questions there; they just accept you at your own valuation and you have 'no end of a good time.' The amusement of Mr. X— on this disclosure of the identity of the so-called Countess Z— can be better imagined than described. He often tells the story and always quite relishes in the fun of his own narration. But there is one point on which he preserves a discreet silence, and that is the real name of the American hostesses that so overwhelmed the fascinating French woman with attentions. As to the truth of the story there is not the slightest shadow of doubt. I have altered certain of the details of locality to prevent identification and that is all.

The conversation turned on the question of recognizing a man's native state from his accent and general method of speech. One gentleman, who, by the way, had been complaining of everything in the south—railways, hotel service, weather and so on—disputed anyone's ability to do so. Mr. Page volunteered to tell where each one of his three companions hailed from and the gentleman disputed his claim. "Well," said Mr. Page, "the gentleman on my right is from Virginia. How do I know? Because I heard him pronounce the word, 'south,' and he gave it roll peculiar only to Virginians. This gentleman is a Mississippian, for—pardon the comparison—I can close my eyes and believe I hear one of the melodiously cadenced voices of my father's slaves. You, sir, turning to his despatcher, are from the north, somewhere near Chicago, I should imagine."

"Well, how in blazes could you tell that?"
"Because, sir, you are such a h—l of a kicker."

REID MUSIC.

TO WIN CLEVELAND VOTERS.
The Aims of The Frances Cleveland Influence Club No. 1.
Many Democratic women of New York have turned politicians for the coming presidential campaign. They will be an important and attractive feature of it. They propose to accomplish their object in womanly ways. The object is to secure the election of Grover Cleveland and thus make Mrs. Grover Cleveland the first lady of the land once more.
"They love babies and have a very tender spot in their hearts for Ruth Cleveland. They are also economical, and rebel against a tariff which reduces the number of gowns in their summer wardrobe. There is a certain unpleasantness about that McKinly bill which compels them to pay $3 for a $15 bonnet on account of its Parisian origin."

These are a few of the reasons for the formation last Wednesday afternoon of the Frances Cleveland Influence Club No. 1. Its originator and president is Mrs. Mary Frost Ormsby, and the first meeting was held at her home, No. 115 West Ninety-sixth street.
Mrs. Ormsby is a woman of striking personality. She is tall and slender with a decisive yet winning manner. "I come of a long race of politicians," said Mrs. Ormsby, "but am the first to go over to the democratic side. This I do because I think the democratic platform comes nearest to what I consider right, and then I am a staunch admirer of Mrs. Cleveland, who is a credit to the type of American womanhood."
Mrs. Ormsby was born in Albany, N. Y. She completed her education at Vassar college and then came to New York to live. For many years she has been principal of the Seabury Seminary on Forty-second street. She is an active member of Sorosis, and prominent in many temperance societies, and as a member of the King's Daughters. For three years she was vice-president for New York in the Woman's National Press association. Last October she went abroad as a delegate to the Universal Peace Union at Rome, where she addressed the congress and presented the flag of peace which was sent by the American women, through the Human Freedom League, to the Italian government.

The basis of the Frances Cleveland Influence Club No. 1 is woman's influence exerted on husbands, sweethearts and friends. The masculine population is to have a tremendous force brought to bear upon it. The platform on which the club stands is as follows: "To voice woman's interests in campaigns of principle; to defend the homes of the land against unjust taxation; to secure the election of the democratic ticket."
The full list of the members of the club is not ready for publication, but many prominent women of New York attended the first meeting. The officers of the club are: President, Mrs. Mary Frost Ormsby; secretary, Miss Sarah E. Fuller; chairman of the executive committee, Marquise Clara Lanza, daughter of Dr. Wm. A. Hammond. Mrs. Elizabeth Remington and Mrs. E. J. Cadwallader were among the first members. The meetings of the club are to be held privately subject to the call of the president. There are to be no platform talks or public discussions. "That we leave for the men," says Mrs. Ormsby. "They can do the talking and cheering, and when they get home the women do the influencing."
"My plan is to write to representative women in the different states, tell of the object of our club and ask them to organize one. We wish to form a series of clubs throughout the United States, all working in harmony for Cleveland."
Another praiseworthy object of the club is to raise all votes above a mercantile basis. According to the women of the Frances Cleveland Influence Club No. 1 votes should not be bought, they should be gained by the influence of good women. There is to be a persuasive, not an aggressive spirit throughout the club.
Each member is to possess a blank book, wherein she is carefully to keep a record of every vote she has secured through her influence for Cleveland. The number of votes secured is to be reported at each meeting.—New York World.
