JUDGE NELSON'S DECISION.

Speaking of patent medicines, the judge says: "I wish to deal fairly and honorably with all, and when I find an article that will do what it is recommended to do, I am not ashamed to say so. I am acquainted with Dr. Vanderpool (having been treated by him for cancer), and have used his blood medicine, known as the S. B. Headache and Liver cure, and while I am seventy-five years old, and have used many pills and other remedies for the blood, liver and kidneys, I must say that for a kidney tonic in Bright's disease, as an alternative for the blood, or to correct the action of the stomach and bowels it is a very superior remedy, and beats anything I ever tried."

USE OF THE PURSE POLITIC.

WHERE THE MONEY COMES FROM AND HOW IT IS EXPENDED.

The Rapid Growth of the Fund During the Last Quarter Century - Why a Presidential Fight is So Expensive - Star-Beggars - Men Who Have Raised a Hundred Thousand in a Day.

Now that campaigning has grown to be an exact science the use of money is becoming every year a more potent factor in national politics. From sources entirely reliable it is learned that the national committees of each of the great parties expended in 1880 $500,000; in 1884 each party spent about $600,000, and in 1888 about $800,000. This year it is expected that the national committees will each collect and expend over $1,000,000. The state committees can be counted on to collect for their individual use about one-quarter of that sum. Thus it will be seen that in the brief period of twelve years the money cost of a campaign has more than doubled. The charge that the greater part of the vast sums I have mentioned is used to corrupt voters and purchase votes, though frequently made is a false and silly one. Nearly if not all of the moneys collected are anticipated by the legitimate expenses of the campaign. These expenses cover a wide range and their volume swells every succeeding campaign. Four years ago the Republican National Committee expended $100,000 in the publication and circulation of campaign documents; an additional $100,000 was devoted to the campaign orators and their expenses; $200,000 more went to Congressional districts where the contest was close and the outcome doubtful, and where it was used to pay hand hire and the cost of the uniforms of marching clubs and of parades and public meetings. Something like $300,000 was sent to the chairmen of State committees of doubtful States, and the cost of maintaining the national headquarters and of the local campaign of this city consumed an equal sum. The expenses of the Democratic National Committee in 1888 varied in some minor details, but its funds were expended through about the same channels as the Republican committee, the campaign methods of both parties being very similar.

The use of large sums of money in politics is a growth of the last twenty years. Previous to that time political campaigning was largely a matter of hurrah and sentiment, and ex-Governor Curtin of Pennsylvania has often told me that the entire cost of the national campaign which ended in the election of Lincoln fell far below that of many a State canvass in the present time. Business men, alert, shrewd and fond of system and order, began in the early '60's to take the management of politics into their hands, and a wonderful change in methods and measures was speedily effected; but it is to Samuel J. Tilden, more than to any other man, that is due the credit of perfecting the method of campaigning now in vogue. Mr. Tilden had a gift for the management of men on a large scale that amounted to genius. He saw that great issues which rose the enthusiasm of the masses, through more essential are not in themselves sufficient to insure success in a campaign, but that much of the work to be effective must be done in secret and that it was of the first importance that every voter should be brought into direct personal contact with the campaign management. This required a comprehensive system, great volumes of correspondence and limitless use of printers' ink - in a word, an organization which reached out and embraced every home and fireside in the land and the operation of which involved the expenditure of vast sums of money. Time stamped Mr. Tilden's methods with the seal of success and they have been given the place of those formerly employed.

In enumerating the expenses of the Republican National Committee in 1888, I have given a fair idea of what those methods are. The circulation of carefully prepared campaign documents is considered most important. These documents not only inform the masses, but furnish a mass of statements and arguments upon which local orators draw freely. They are in the main speeches of leading Senators and Congressmen, but very brief and trenchant cards and circulars, which pierce with a single shaft the armor of the enemy, are employed with telling effect. In 1884 the famous "Run, Romanism and Rebellion" utterance of Dr. Burdhard was printed on small cards and distributed before the doors of all the Catholic churches of the country the Sunday before election. Its effect was most disastrous, and as there was little or no time in which to counteract it, it had much to do in determining the result of the election. This year the two National Committees will probably spend fully $300,000 in the preparation, publication and circulation of documents. This represents a mass of printed matter nearly large enough to fill a small freight train, and it is an open question whether or not to much money is not spent in this way. Still such shrewd politicians as Senator Quay and Senator Hill are of the opinion that the plan of appeal has more influence on the wavering and doubtful than any other.

The campaign orator does not cut the figure in politics that he did in former years. The multiplication of printing presses and telegraph lines has struck a heavy blow to his prestige as a creator and mold of public opinion, but his influence is still great and must be taken in account by campaign managers. During the months of a national campaign hundreds of speakers of national and local repute are constantly employed by the national and State direction there will be no stress of finances in the Republican committee. The Treasurer of the Democratic National Committee is Robert B. Roosevelt, a member of one of the old Knickerbocker families, a forceful leader of his party and a business man of high standing. Mr. Bliss will be assisted in the work of raising funds by an Advisory Committee of five. The New England member of this committee, it is said, will be Senator Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island. Mr. Aldrich is a man of exceptional shrewdness and persuasive powers, and is believed to be better fitted to raise money than any other leader of his party in the New England states. His personal acquaintance among the wealthy men of his own adjacent states is very large. Benjamin F. Jones of Pittsburgh will probably represent the Middle states on the committee. He is a skillful politician, who knows the great industries of Pennsylvania thoroughly, and was chairman of the National Committee in 1884. Another Pennsylvania member of the committee may be Hamilton Diston of Philadelphia. Jesse M. Spaulding of Chicago will be one of the Western members of the committee. He is ex-collector of the port of Chicago, a man of wealth and identified with many of the leading financial institutions of his city. The other western member of the committee will doubtless be Senator Philatus Sawyer of Wisconsin. Senator Sawyer, besides being a battle-scarred political veteran, is an ardent supporter of President Harrison. He is very rich, having been engaged in the lumber business for many years, and knows all of the leading business men and politicians of the northwest. Senator Sawyer gives liberally himself and can always be depended upon to make others do the same. So it will be seen that the financial part of the Republican campaign is in good hands. Treasurer Roosevelt will have the assistance of a campaign committee composed of Senator Calvin S. Brice, Senator Arthur P. Gorman, Lieutenant-Governor William F. Sheehan, Senator M. W. Ransom, Benjamin T. Cable of Illinois, Bradley B. Smalley of Vermont, E. C. Wall of Wisconsin, and Josiah Quincy of Massachusetts, and of such men as William C. Whitney and E. Cornelius Benedict. Mr. Whitney, who is the personal representative of Mr. Cleveland in the present campaign, is a many times millionaire and in close touch with the wealthy members of his party. Mr. Benedict is a rich Wall-street broker, and a warm personal friend of the ex-President. It is said that between them they have already raised a round quarter of a million for use during the campaign.

From whom in the main do the funds thus collected come? The answer is, from large corporations, who, conservative and cautious, favor retention of the party in power, and from wealthy individuals who take a patriotic pride in the success of their cause. To name the men who are the chief contributors of the republican and democratic funds would be a very difficult if not an impossible task. The Republican list would include Postmaster-General Wanamaker, who, with some of his personal friends, collected several hundred thousand dollars for use in the campaign of 1888; Andrew Carnegie, George M. Pullman, Phil Armour, Stephen Elkins and others too numerous to mention. The Democrats, on the other hand, always count with safety upon liberal contributions from Arthur Sewall, Frank Jones, John R. McPherson, Oliver H. Payne, John L. Mitchell, ex-Mayor William R. Grace, Governor R. P. Flower, Henry Villard and other millionaire members of their party. Frank Jones, who is one of the richest men in New England, always gives freely himself, and what is more important, is very successful in inducing others to do the same. The same is true of John L. Mitchell, who is of the wealthiest man in Wisconsin, and of ex-Mayor Grace, who, in a campaign in which his interest is fully aroused, is capable of splendid work in a financial way. When Grace takes his coat off in a fight there is sure to be all the money that is needed for the battle. Governor Flower, in collecting campaign funds, follows a method that is all his own. He makes out a list of those upon whom he intends to call, with the amount which he thinks each man should give set opposite his name, head the list with his own subscription for a generous amount, and then goes the rounds. As upon those who Governor Flower calls are rich men

Healthful Arctic Regions.

There is one side of the Arctic regions which has never had due attention paid to it and that is the medical and curative side. Davos Platz has shown what could do in consumption, but in the life-giving air of the Arctic circle no noxious germ can live. The only illness of any consequence which ever attacks a winterer is an explosive illness. It is a safe prophecy that before many years are passed steam yachts will turn to the north every summer with a cargo of the weak chested and people will understand that nature's ice house is a much more healthy place than her vapor bath.

Spearing Swordfish.

Spearing swordfish is at once exciting, perilous and remunerative. Last year swordfish sold as high as eleven cents a pound in this port, says the Portland (Me.) Press, and a single fish will often weigh 500 or 1000 pounds. The method of getting the fish affords an opportunity for great sport. Like the shark, the swordfish can be seen for a considerable distance by his back fin, which protrudes above the surface of the water as he swims. But, unlike the shark, the swordfish moves steadily with the upper tip of his tail also out of the water, as rigid and steady as the fin itself. Swordfish also generally go in shoals. The swordfish is captured by means of a long spear or harpoon to the shaft of this spear is attached a stout line about 300 feet long, and to the end of the line is made fast a stout water tight cask. Each harpoon is good for one swordfish and a schooner usually carries a considerable number of them.

How Chicago is Spelled.

Geo. E. Hatcher, one of Captain McGrath's secretaries in the city delivery department of the postoffice, is preparing a unique exhibit for the postoffice at the World's fair grounds. Part of Mr. Hatcher's duties is to decipher back addressed letters after all the postoffice experts in that line have failed. In this Mr. Hatcher has no equal. The bulk of the badly addressed letters are from foreign lands. In sorting over these letters Mr. Hatcher kept an account of the different ways the word Chicago is spelled. Yesterday the record showed 197 different ways. Some ripe schoolboy in Finland sent a letter to his brother here last week and spelled the name Zizzazo. Still another foreigner, possibly with some sinister motive, spelled the word Jagagio. Hiphah, Jajjha, Sheebchah, Hizzag and Chieago are also prime varieties and all are down on Mr. Hatcher's list.

The surest and best of all remedies for all disorders of the liver, stomach and blood, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Those queerly constituted persons who imagine they have a respect for the memory of deceased persons whose graves they despoil, have already carried away every portable object from the burial place of Walter Whitman and clipped chunks from the granite walls. The saying that "we are fearfully and wonderfully made" is clearly properly applied, for upon examination of the human skin with the latest improved microscopes it is found to be covered with minute scales overlapping each other, exactly like those of a fish.
