Thursday, May 4, 1893.

At that certain meeting held at the Grange hall last Saturday some one asked how it happened that the per diem of the commissioners was raised from three to four dollars. No one could tell. Not even Commissioner Henderson, who was in Salem at the time the law was enacted, knew anything of it. Perhaps the grangers would not object to the raise if they were getting four dollar men.

On the local page is a notice calling a public meeting for Wednesday evening, May 10th, at the city hall. The object of the meeting is not definitely stated, but it goes without saying that the good of the city will come in for a fair share of the attention of these present. There is great need of an awakening among our business men on the subject here suggested, and it is hoped the city hall will be crowded next Wednesday evening.

Professor Smith, the Canadian statesman, has returned to his home in Toronto, after a visit to Washington. He has acquired an immense estimate of President Grover Cleveland. He says that Mr. Cleveland to a great extent dominates both parties in the United States, and adds: "With the exception of Lincoln, I know of no man during my acquaintance with the United States who has been such an influence upon politics in that country."

At the April term the county court instructed the treasurer to apportion the funds as received and call outstanding warrants as fast as they could be paid. This was very well for the court who, after all has been said, is anxious to see some of the present debt paid, but it was not so good for the treasurer, who did not suit the state treasurer. The latter official somehow has the notion that laws are made to be obeyed, so he informed the county treasurer that the state law would have to be paid out of the first money received, which is now being done.

An organ of the people's party says that if the volume of currency was doubled it would double the value of every man's farm. This is a stupid fallacy. It would not double the value of every man's farm, it would simply increase the value of land, putting more "unearned increment" in the pockets of manipulators and speculators, among whom there may be a few legitimate farmers, but we doubt it. With every increase of land value under "present conditions" there is an extra load for the working farmers and workingmen to carry. Thus it is that men tend to themselves with false doctrines in the name of reform and the people.

Three eminent political experts discuss vigorously in the April Forum from different points of view, the present crisis in national affairs and the position and prospects of the two great parties. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, defines the true attitude of republicans as a "watchful opposition." President Seth Low, of Columbia college, frankly considers the tremendous task before Mr. Cleveland, and Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer, the well-known German-American editor, enlarges on the danger from disagreement between Mr. Cleveland and his party followers on financial questions. These articles together constitute the best authoritative presentation of national prospects and political tendencies anywhere available and their value to the political student in the present crisis is unique.

"There is something irresistibly absurd in the Union Pacific and other trunk lines halting at Portland while the Pacific with its wonderful commercial possibilities is so near at hand. There is no such absurdity in the whole railroad system of the United States and Mexico. A year hence people will be amazed that the inducements which this region offers to railroads were so long overlooked."—Asiatic. That is a fact. At least three railroads should have long ago extended their lines down to Oregon's gateway city. The people of Astoria, however, who have waited so long and impatiently, may rest secure in the face of one fact, and that is that when one of these roads builds, the others will be compelled to follow suit. And they are to be congratulated upon the prospects of one of these roads building to their city this year.—Statesman.

They increase appetite, purify the whole system and act on the liver. See how small.

ANOTHER REASON.

Another excellent argument is found for abolishing the senate executive sessions. Ex-Senator Ingalls in a recent letter declared that the most eloquent speech ever made by Roscoe Conkling was delivered during an executive session, and hence never given to the world. Conkling left no very great oratorical mark upon the regular records of the senate, and it is almost sad that all these years should have elapsed without the country knowing of this brilliant effort which caused all his fellow senators to listen as if in a spell. His mighty eloquence and convincing logic. During the last few years the nation has not been edified with many vigorous orations in the senate that have caused the whole people, as it were, to stamp them as remarkably eloquent and irresistibly forcible. If then the senate is hiding its light under a bushel, and if the empty benches of the gallery are the only auditors aside from the dignified senators, let the bushel be raised, the doors opened, and the floodgates of eloquence lifted to satisfy the thirst of the people for at least an occasional burst of real oratory. This is a practical age, but still there is nothing more fascinating than a speech which is eloquent, full of fire and logic, inspiring in its force, delivered in good voice and gesture, and compelling the attention even of enemies.—Telegraph.

A GREAT INVENTION REPORTED.

The reported invention of a successful carbonic acid gas engine belongs to the class of things which are highly important if true.

The problem to which all inventive minds are apt to direct themselves in our time is that of utilizing forces which may be had more cheaply than by the burning of coal. There is in carbonic acid a vast store of force easily and cheaply produced. If it can be utilized there will be a gain of incalculable advantage to the world, and many inventors have made their heads ache in attempts to devise practicable means for its use.

George H. Chapelle, of New York, thinks he has solved the problem and that he will presently be able to put in operation an engine under the enormous pressure of 3,500 pounds to the square inch, the power costing so nearly nothing as to be almost out of consideration.

If Mr. Chapelle has really done anything of the kind he will be at liberty at once to take his place near the head of the class of great benefactors, and a situation as a millionaire is open to his acceptance.

It is now understood that an extraordinary session of congress will be called early in September for consideration primarily of the tariff question. This determination on the part of the administration puts the ultra protection organs on their mettle and again they cry that the country will be ruined. Not so. This time the tariff will be reformed by its friends. That is the democratic party with its reform allies in other parties, who have been contending for twenty years for the abolishment of war taxes, are now in a position to help themselves and give them what they voted for in 1890 and 1892. We are told, however, that the balance of trade is already heavily against us and that any reduction of the duty will cause a panic and put gold to a premium. The 6,678,578 voters who voted for Cleveland and Weaver as against Harrison, think they know what they want and now that they are in a majority of over 1,500,000 they ought to have it. To deny them to nullify constitution, and to our republican brethren especially the nullifier has no place in the United States. Well, he will not have; the constitution will be obeyed; the majority will rule and we will have tariff reform. But not of the McKinley kind.

The World's fair was formally opened on Monday. The attendance was large, and quite a number of people were injured in the jam. There was a difference in the reports, some claiming the exhibits are in place and others that they are not, and will not be for two weeks yet. However, it is reasonable to suppose that there is as much on exhibition as one can visit in a week, and by that time there will be something new perhaps to attract his attention. Travel from this state (thirty has not set in yet, but before the end of May quite a number of familiar figures will be missed and "gone to the fair" is what will be said of them. It is too early to receive reports of the extent or magnitude of the exposition as a whole, but from what has been promised no one is likely to be disappointed or regret the time and money expended in visiting the fair.

THE TELEPHONE-REGISTER has made arrangements with all the prominent papers and periodicals in the United States whereby they can be obtained in connection with this paper at less than the publisher's price. Our old subscribers or new subscribers can have the benefit of this reduction and no trouble on their part. GOING EAST.

To say that the travel across the continent is light would express the fact but faintly. The same number of coaches are seen as when the travel is heavy. While writing this the occupants of the first class coach consisted of three women and four men. The Fair travel has not yet commenced and the transcontinental roads do not look for the rush to commence before the first of June. A trip across the country at this season of the year is very uninteresting and if it were not for the people there would be little amusement. Each train contains all kinds of people and some are foolish enough to create amusement for the others. John Maddock and family, of Goldendale, formerly of McMinnville, are on the train on their way east, and will be present at the graduation exercises of the Jefferson college at Philadelphia. His brother Louis Maddock, will graduate and after a sight of the World's fair will go to San Antonio, Texas, and practice his profession.

While the farmers of Oregon are discouraged at the late rains, they should brace up as their lot is a good one compared with the farmer of eastern Washington. Piles of tin cans in the rear of every farm house tell the tale. Potted luxuries from Oregon come high and the scanty crop of the coming year will not be spent for edibles from Oregon. The cadaverous suburban farmer of Eastern Washington has state pride in quantity and while reading a label on a tin fruit can, will say with great earnestness that Washington beats Oregon in quantity and quality of fruit. A mild state of insanity is the result of continued residence in the state and the people of Oregon should be content to let them vent it in advertising their state. Every new man in Washington means just one more mouth to be filled, at a good price, by the Oregon farmer.

All that I have seen so far in eastern Washington is country. Miles of it on both sides of the railroad. Its value is about four cents per acre. Farm houses are scattered and everything not tied down is scattered. You cannot find a person in the whole eastern part of the state that will admit that he has moved from Oregon. He is ashamed of the fact. In fact intervals he will remark that some time ago he visited a paradise in his dreams and was informed that it was the Willamette valley. It was not a dream, but a reality. The hard times, no markets, etc., are leaving their effects upon his brain. A short residence in Oregon will cure him. Times are duller than they are in Oregon and no one but real estate brokers and bank cashiers have enough money to fly away from the bummer from the effect even who have supported them in luxury.

It seems to have rained as hard in Washington as in Oregon but less farm work has been done. No snow has been encountered up to date except a little west of Missoula. Considerable stock has been killed by the hard winter, judging by the number dead along the track. The range is very poor and but few cattle have been seen. Bleak, desolate, dreary, uninviting and tough are a few terms that can be used in giving a concise and graphic description of the country.

In my next I will attempt to tell you how to go to the World's fair at a small expenditure of money. I have been keeping tab of all expenses and sampling the quality of dining car and lunch counter fare. Have tested the comfort of the Pullman palace car and the tourist sleeper; tasted the whiskey and water and I might just as well say that it does not matter much which you drink, whiskey or water, they are both thin. One thing I notice, Oregon whiskey is appreciated in this country and we would advise everyone, pro or no, to carry a bottle, as porters will do more for a drink than for a quarter. We hailed the date of the fair, the porter has fallen in love with Maddock, who is pulling off a deduction of Jamaica ginger, alcohol, water and cleaning cream (regulation Washington whiskey) as pure Oregon whiskey. The porter is rather dubious about the origin and thinking Maddock in earnest, hates to admit this sample of Oregon whiskey is poor. Will attempt to tell you more of interest next time, for while you are reading this I shall be in Chicago seeing the sights.
