Entered at the postoffice at McMinnville Oregon, as second-class matter. Resolutions of Condolence and All Other...

Thursday, August 31, 1893. The editor of the Telegram wants a bow wow.

An electric line to the Willamette river through Dayton is practical and will pay.

Thanks to the commonsense of the majority of the members of the legislature the Penneyer stay law is out of sight and mind.

The year of 1893 will go down in history as a peculiar one. Financial depression, great storms, plagues and pestilences are a few of the items that will be charged against it.

It is now stated beyond a question that Amick, a Cincinnati physician, has found a complete cure for pulmonary consumption. It is hoped that it is not another Koch fiasco.

It was rumored some time ago that a person by the name of Ellis had been elected to congress from Oregon. Since then we have not heard a word about the gentleman. Where is he at?

With the new county officers next year will commence the salary system, and just as many good men will be candidates in the conventions of the future as there has been in the conventions of the past.

The efforts of some papers and people to saddle the responsibility of the death of Lieut. Nelson upon Gen. Compton are ridiculous. It is such a farce that a person without brains could see through it.

Cholera is raging in Russia and in several Mediterranean ports, but thanks to the efficient measures taken by the authorities of our seaboard cities, it has not yet appeared in the United States, and probably will not.

Yamhill county has paid the state taxes in good coin of the realm, so all this talk of indebtedness to the state does not apply to Yamhill. This county would be pleased to see the state sue the delinquent counties.

The small papers located near large timber, preemption and homestead tracts are now engaged in changing their policies in order to hold the patronage of the land office. Parasites of this order are a curse to the community in which they live.

While the newspapers of other cities are gleefully citing the fact that their suspended banks are about to resume business, the papers of this city have nothing to say. The banks of McMinnville are solid and have been doing business all through the depression.

The papers talking of a $100,000 a year appropriation for the militia are very well informed indeed. If they knew as much about other matters as they do of this they would be fit persons for the editorial staff of the evening Telegram. The appropriation was $20,000 a year for two years.

With some means of transporting freight from the Willamette river to this city the grip of the Southern Pacific would loosen. An electric line can be built at a slight expense and it can haul freight and passengers enough to pay a good dividend upon the investment.

Secretary Carlisle has ordered the United States mints at Philadelphia and San Francisco to commence coining some $5,000,000 in gold bullion that is stored in the treasury and is a part of the $100,000,000 gold reserve. It will be coined into $10, $5, and $2 pieces, preference being given to the two first two denominations. The capacity of the Philadelphia mint is about $500 per month.

Miners from Ceur d'Alene are now employed as farm hands in Eastern Oregon and Washington at $1 per day and board. Van Delahunt informs the Welcome that the mine owners of Idaho would give employment to thousands of these laborers if they would work for $1.75 per day and board. But their union will not permit this, and the mine owners cannot afford to pay the $3.50 per day demanded.—Wef-con.

John Bach McMaster, the eminent historian, is preparing for the September issue of the Atlantic a financial and historical review, entitled "A Century's Struggle for Silver." In this review, Mr. McMaster will depict vividly the widespread embarrassment that prevailed among merchants and others in the United States a century ago for want of a small exchangeable coinage, and will insist on the vital importance of an abundant and convenient silver-currency medium in everyday mercantile transactions.

From the latest reports it is estimated that the surplus wheat of the crop of 1892 will not supply the deficit of country not growing enough for their consumption by at least 1,000,000 bushels. The deficit of the wheat importing countries amounts to 750,000 bushels while the surplus of the wheat exporting countries is 275,000 bushels. The tariff war between Russia and Germany will result in favor of America, so the American farmer who is able to hold his wheat is safe in doing so, unless he has obligations to meet.

THE WILSON BILL PASSED.

Goes Through the House With 129 Majority. The Silver Men are Sounded Under—The Majority in Favor of Repeal was Beyond All Expectations.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The galleries in the house were crowded long before the time for assembling by persons interested in the result of the balloting on the silver question after a two weeks debate. The speaker commanded order at noon. Nearly every seat in the hall was filled, and there was unmistakable evidence of general and individual interest in the matter on hand. The chaplain prayed briefly and his voice was inaudible at a distance of more than 10 feet. After the reading of the journal, Weaver, of New York, appeared at the head of the house, on the arm of his colleague, General Tracey, and was sworn in by the speaker. The resolution contained in the order of procedure on the silver question was read by the clerk, providing for a vote first upon the free coinage of silver at the present ratio of 16 to 1. Bailey of Texas asked if, in the event of all amendments included in the order being defeated, it would be in order to propose an additional amendment germane to the subject. Speaker Crisp replied that, as at present advised, he would answer no; that the order proposed was so framed that the house may consider, but that when the time came to formally present the question the gentlemen from Texas might be heard. McMillin desired to offer an amendment providing for the free coinage of the product of the silver mines of the United States, but Bland objected, saying that such a proposition was no free coinage at all. The speaker then replying the silver purchase clause of the Sherman act, was read, and Bland offered his first amendment for free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1; defeated, 123 to 225, amid applause from the anti-silver men, who did not expect so large a majority.

The announcement of the vote was received with applause and some surprise at the majority against free coinage, it being nearly double the largest estimate made by the anti-silver committee. Bland, from his seat at the extreme left of the speaker, smiled grimly as he heard the result, nervously chewing and rocking to and fro in his pivot chair. The figures show that a majority of the democrats voted against free coinage. As the clerk began calling the roll Bryan walked down the center aisle, calm and grave, around to where the silver leaders sat. They sat in consultation some time, and then Bryan made his way back to his seat. With the wave of applause and jubilation that swept over the hall as the crushing defeat of free coinage was announced, the whole house seemed to take a deep breath and lose interest in what was to follow for the next few votes. These were on various ratios, but every one knew the ratio question was dead.

The first of the ratio votes was taken amid such a buzzing as fairly drowned the voice of the clerk at times, and the few members who were keeping tally on the rest had to appeal to the speaker repeatedly to preserve enough order to make the hearing possible. Only "old stagers" on the silver question stood out for the 16 to 1 ratio. For the most part that faction was not going to fool with any ratio it could not get the one it wanted. Man after man who had voted aye on the first roll call, voted no on the second, and many others left the chamber, indifferent to the result. The vote on the question of free coinage at 17 to 1 resulted—ayes 100, noes 240. On this vote, beside the loss of the populist votes, members of that party withholding votes, there were several negative votes from those who voted in favor of a ratio of 16 to 1. When it came to the 18 to 1 amendment, the chorus of dissatisfaction which arose when Hatch of Missouri insisted on a demand for the ayes and noes showed the house was in no temper for delay. Bland did not join in the demand. The vote on the second ratio amendment made a slightly better showing for the silver men, not because of any considerable increase in the number of adversaries. The vote resulted—ayes 102, noes 230.

By the time the third vote was called Bland had recovered wind enough to make a demand for the ayes and noes himself, although he did not stay in his seat long enough to see how things were going, and the silver men who had united to prevent a further roll call, concluded to let things go and put everybody on record on every phase of the question. The vote on the 19 to 1 amendment was ayes 105, noes 237. The slighter gains made on higher ratios were not unexpected by some of the leaders, and it was the published impression of these that a ratio of 20 to 1, next amendment offered, would poll the largest vote recorded in favor of free coinage. The result of the call was ayes 119, noes 222.

The amendment to re-negotiate the Bland-Atison act was defeated—136 to 213. Wilson repeal bill was then passed—ayes 239, noes 110.

The all absorbing topic of conversation is the price of wheat. The prosperity of the Willamette valley depends upon the wheat crop, while its soil is capable of raising anything that can be produced in any other section of country north of the semi-tropics. Was there a large acreage of fruit bearing orchards, or large dairy and poultry interests in the valley, instead of one great industry, the price of one certain article would not influence the prosperity of the section. Mixed farming acts as a governor upon the financial condition of a community and assures a circulation of money at all times. The residents of this country will soon recognize that small amounts of money coming in at short intervals during the year results in more prosperity and contentment than does a large amount once a year.

The per capita circulation can be increased indefinitely and as long as it is hoarded times will not be better. The circulation is large enough, provided it is in the field doing the work for which it was created.

GOOD ADVICE.

The action of congress on Monday has already started the wheels of industry, and the first rays of returning confidence are brightening the financial horizon. In a very short time the country will be prosperous as of yore, unless such bigoted asses as the editor of the Evening Telegram have enough influence with the loose and immoral element, to which such people and papers cater, as to produce the revolution that they threaten. When man has so far retrograded as to express such sentiments as appeared in the Monday evening issue of the Telegram, it is time that press censorship should commence and the fool-killer start on his journey. Such silly drivings cannot emanate from a mind whose parts are healthy. With great dignity the editor writes: "We who are Americans will stand up for America, and if we fail we will die with our boots on." The editor has been waiting to die with his boots on for so long a time that it is now impossible to tell whether his feet or his brain dictates the articles that appear in his paper—they both have the same aroma. We suggest that he cut his boots off, wash his feet and give his brain a chance to recover.

The senate has reported a substitute to the Wilson bill amounting to the same thing with the exception that it contains a declaration, using the words of the democratic platform, to provide a currency of gold and silver and to maintain a parity between the metals. Everyone recognizes the need of the silver already circulating in the country and more of it would not hurt if our store of gold could be increased. Our prosperous condition is due to the fact that the mills have continued in operation and to the sales of beef cattle throughout the country and in no small extent the creameries now in operation in Tillamook county. Where formerly no farmer realized on his butter until the winter or next spring the patrons of the creamery are now receiving cash monthly to a considerable amount. The prices paid by the creamery enable the farmers to realize more on the butter than if they made their own.

The Fairview creamery has been shipping considerable butter at fair prices, and is making considerable reputation in the Portland market. At first they only shipped 200 pounds each trip to the Elmore, this was increased to 500 pounds, and last week instructions were received from Mark L. Oahn & Co. to ship larger amounts as they were getting short. This is very encouraging to the enterprising farmers who are operating the creamery.

The creameries are proving a vast benefit in another and a permanent way. Land owners are appreciating the direct profit of each additional patch of grass land. The consequence is earnest effort to clean out corners, old stumps and brush heaps and scatter grass seed in the ashes.—Tillamook Headlight.
