A Trip to Soda Springs.

ED. REPORTER: July 26th 1 started

E.D. KEPORTER: July 26th 1 started on a trip to the Soda Springs in company with our city marshal, his wife and my wife and son, West Wallace. We went by way of Wheatland; after crossing the river went some three miles, then took to the left and went by the way of St. Louis, a small village some six miles north-east of wheatland. It lies in a beautiful prairie, about a quarter of a mile from the timber lands of the Willamette. Before reaching St. Louis we passed some beautiful farms, covered with with healthy grain; the farm houses were good. At St. Louis we turned to the right, and went within about one mile of Gervais, another small village that the East Side railroad passes through; thence we bore a north-easterly course and went near Woodburn, another little town.— The country is beautiful from three near Woodburn, another little town.—
The country is beautiful from three miles east of Wheatland to Pudding river; from Pudding river to the Springs it is mostly timber land and rough and if you don't think so, try it once, and if you do not give it up then I will treat you to some soda water.—
After traveling some eight miles from Woodburn we brought up at Mr. J. Slynck's one of the enterprising men Shuck's, one of the enterprising men of Oregon. He has a fine grist and saw mill and is doing a good business. We stayed all night with him, and you can rest assured his wife knows how to We stayed all night with him, and you can rest assured his wife knows how to get up a good meal; her table was furnished with the nicest honey I ever saw in Oregon, and your humble writer was not backward in making use of it. The next morning our marshal and West Wallace started on foot an hour before the wagon did, in order to kill some grouse. After we had traveled eight miles we stopped at a farm house to get some oats, and who should come up but the marshal and West with their coats off and their faces as red as if they had just come out of Caswell's saloon, I do not say they were lost; it was not them that was lost, but the Springs; they staid with the wagon the balance of the way. We reached the Springs at I o'clock; found twenty-six camps ou the ground. The weather was splendid. The next day was Saturday and the wagons came pouring in until/there was a large crowd on the ground. I was told that a good share of the people in ten miles of the Springs. AN OUTSIDER'S OPINION OF YAMBILL.

Mr. S. A. Clark, editor of the Farmer, has lately taken a trip through the West Side counties, and here is what he says of Yamhill:

he says of Yamhill:

It is interesting to note the difference in landsdapes north and south of Chehalem mountains. Yamhill has great variety of surface and soil. It is not so large as Marion or Linu, but it is unsurpassed for its prouctiveness. Along the coast range it has a beautiful and sightly country that is thoroughly farmed, much of it, and produces crops that gives Yamhill its well known reputation. This western portion of Yamhill is magnificent country. Sheridan id from any cause that I could certainly know, were excluded. School fund mortgages and mortgages given to the Trustees of Baptist College of McMinnville, and mortgages covering land in two counties were not included."

Yawhill is possessed of a number of thriving towns and it is certain that a country that can support good towns must prosper. This year's wheat crop will be large and will be equal to any other country of its population. With a good seasonable May and June the harvest in Yamhill would have been simply enormous. Take the stand of fall wheat that stood last December and had that been carried through to perfection the result would have been the greatest harvest ever known. What one sees in a harried journey is only an index, but reports from all sections given in by farmers themselves Yamhili is possessed of a number of tions given in by farmers themselves make it certain that Yambill will have as good a wheat yield as any Willam-ette county the present year.
