

THE REPORTER.

McMINNVILLE, OREGON, SEPT. 8, 1883.

A violent storm visited the eastern Atlantic coast last week. Several vessels were swamped and their crews lost.

The total receipts of the State University at Eugene for the year ending June 30th was, $15,835.89; expenditures, $14,797.22.

It is said that a term of the United States Court recently held at Deadwood cost the government over $10,000; and yet not a conviction was reached in the many indictments.

The News wants six geese—one for every night this week beginning Monday. Species not named. Age, sex, or previous condition not mentioned. For geese and rain the News's bosom yearneth. Here too. Pass the geese and water, please.

The largest number of passengers ever leaving San Francisco for Portland in a single day sailed last Sunday—the Oregon and Queen of the Pacific both leaving with full lists. Tuesday the Queen, while coming into the Columbia, ran onto the sands of Clatsop spit, and at latest accounts was still lying there, though it was hoped to get her off at high tide yesterday. Her passengers were transferred to Astoria, in safety.

The total expense of the Northern Pacific in the entertainment of its guests at the last spike excursion will be half a million of dollars. And many say that this is Villard's extravagance. Well, what of it? Isn't it better for him to spend the money and have it put into circulation than have it "cached" away in some remote corner, never to be heard from, in a miserly fashion? We think so; for then we all get the benefit of it.

There is a little breeze on the high corporation boards. A number of stockholders in the old O. S. N. Co. have brought suit against the Villard syndicate. The plaintiffs live in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut. They seem to have just awakened to the fact that Villard et al. came into control of the O. S. N. Co. property several years ago, and they further seem to be out of sorts because said property was bought at a low price because of the embarrassment of the old company. And they bring suit to collect interest on $2,000,000, and to enjoin the Villard regime from selling, transferring or disposing of any rights or property of the O. S. N. Co. As this particular property seems to be a good paying one just now, undoubtedly Mr. Villard don't care anything about disposing of it. At least he won't till—he gets ready, injunction or no injunction.

The great triennial convale has ended and that it was a huge success is attested by the following telegram from Chicago dated Sept. 2nd:

"San Francisco has reason to be proud of the comments made upon her hospitality. There is yet to be published any interview reflecting upon the management of the convale. Even St. Bernard speak consolingly about their defeat, and do not attribute anything wrong to the judges or any one else. They think they were defeated owing to a rule which compelled them to drill with right and left guides, when they had none. Mr. Moulton spoke enthusiastically of the treatment accorded St. Bernard in particular. The entire convale was managed admirably; everything possible had been done, and well done to make it a success. There were no hitches and no grumblings. The grand commander of California, and particularly the convale committee, are deserving of the very highest praise. This is the tone of the sentiment uttered by members of all countries in transit, and if there is a growler among them all he is yet to be heard from."

Of all the commanderies present at the convale, none presented a more creditable appearance than did that from Oregon; and the Oregon commandery had the honor of having the best band of music present at the doings—the 1st Cavalry Band, of Walla Walla.

We are beginning to suspicion that the average biblical archaeologist nowadays is an unmitigated dead beat. Men are admirably clever in the arts of deception. In this one subject of ancient relics, where dead languages and calligraphies that are simply blanks before the understanding of the common world appear as proofs of their genuineness, there is a peculiar advantage to the designing rascal who takes a notion to speculate upon the credulity and good motives of the people who are ever eager to learn all they can of the faith they proclaim, and of its origin and progress down through the ages gone before. Shapira, the celebrated European "dasher" bids fair, at last, to get his name set down among the reprobates. The Hberale manuscript which he claimed to have gotten from a distinguished Arab, and which the latter claimed to have descended in his family through generations from a prophet, is pronounced spurious by eminent scholars who have examined it and find that the writing is but a few years old. Thus the oldest "sheep-skin edition" of Deuteronomy is likely to go down into the waste-basket and the British government escapes a polite robbery of £1,000,000. A good place of banishment for the hordes of "archaeological" frauds and sensation mongers with which the world abounds would be a good thing to prepare about this age of the world.

NORTHERN PACIFIC LANDS.

Without government land grants, there would be no transcontinental railroads. It is upon the grant that the company gets its credit, and it is by the passage of the railroad through the line of grant that not only the company's odd sections are sold and peopled, but also that the government's even sections increase in value. For example, no sooner had the Northern Pacific railroad grant been acquired than the government raised the price of its sections from $1.25 single minimum, to $1.60 double minimum. The Northern Pacific railroad company sells its land at from $2.50 to $5.00 per acre, and set the terms as follows: One fifth is cash at date of purchase, interest at six per cent on the remainder, and the second principal payment two years after purchase, with principal payments every year thereafter. The average lots are two hundred acres, and the settler is bound to have not less than one-sixth under cultivation within 10 years.—The land mostly sold is wheat land, although purchases of grazing land have been numerous, and already the company have a fringe of fields and a dotting of homes along almost the entire line of the third transcontinental road. The great advantage of the Northern Pacific lands in the fact that it passes for its entire distance through fertile lands. Already there is a large local trade in Washington Territory and Idaho, while in Montana the line passes through an old settled country and calls at several large towns and cities, all doing an established business.

Dismissing the scheme of building a railroad from Astoria via the Clatsop plains and Tillamook bay to the Willamette valley, the Oregonian says: "That this region is but sparsely settled now is no objection at all to the scheme, for there will be no trouble in filling up a country so well favored.—Three years ago scarce twenty families lived within the range of the Pen d'Oreille division of the Northern Pacific railroad, and last year the local passenger business alone of the division paid its whole operating expense. To cut across the mountains from Tillamook bay, however, would be to leave half the loaf untouched. The Nestucca, Salmon and Siletz rivers, further south, are rich in varied resources, and could soon supply an important traffic. To extend the road south in connection with the Oregon Pacific at Yaquina bay would by no means be a bad scheme independent of the facilities which such connection might afford for shipping wheat from the center of the valley direct to deep water at Astoria. The timber resources of this region, alone, would furnish a railroad with business for several years."
