PROHIBITION NOTES.

From the Morning and Day of Reform, for Feb. 1884, I glean the following:
Mr. James A. Troutman sent a list of questions to every county Attorney, county Superintendent, and police Judge in the State of Kansas. Dec. 4th 1883, 600 letters in all, for the purpose of learning the effect, and present statutes of prohibition. Replies have been received to over one third of the letters sent out, consisting of a full report from 66 of the 81 organized counties. These replies demonstrate that prohibition has materially decreased the number of saloons; that an unusual large number of prosecutions under the law has resulted in connection, and that the principle of prohibition was growing stronger.

Ex-Gov. St. John, of Kansas, said in a speech at Brooklyn, Jan. 1882, that "in at least three-fourths of the state prohibition is as absolutely and as honestly obeyed and enforced as any other law on the statute book—prohibiting crime." He also said in a speech at Des Moines, Jan. 1882:—"I have before me, a statement signed by all the city officers of the city of Glad, Johnson county, showing that under prohibition, the financial and moral condition of the city has greatly improved, and trade has greatly increased. The city has no policemen and needs none; the city Marshal alone performing all the police duty. The county Attorney adds that, what is said of the success of prohibition in the city of Glad, holds good throughout the county of Jackson, and other towns and counties make equally as good a showing. The Newton Kansas says: Our opinion is that the law has been very much of a success; society here is better than it used to be; very few penniless loafers are to be seen half drunk, upon our streets; men who formerly spent most of their earnings for drink, now pay their debts, live better, and dress better.

The Weekly Capital says: The district court is a terror to saloon keepers and prohibition will prohibit in Judge Martin's district; the same paper says that Charlie McKinon, wholesale liquor dealer made an assignment to-day; he claims that the Kansas prohibitory law has destroyed his business and is the cause of his failure.

Most of the above is taken from J. N. Stearn's collection of facts. Many Temperance people are already well posted in regard to these facts, but I hope they will bear with me for continuing to bring them forward for hundreds of people are not familiar with the facts and will be glad to have proof that prohibition does prohibit.

EVER LASTING.

BRAINS VS MONEY.
The Washington Enterprise makes some sensible remarks concerning the Sullivan caravan that lately visited Oregon. The remarks are so forcible at this time that we take the liberty of reproducing them:
Here we are, on the eve of hard times, and men who begrudge giving their wives and families even fifty cents, will rush pell-mell to a slugging match and pay a dollar a head to see one brute pommel another until he is senseless. Shame on them! The next day they cry hard times and refuse to let a cent go out of their pockets, even in support of their families, because they have lost four or five dollars betting on the result of the contest. The fools are not all dead yet. It makes us blush for our sex when we see such a degrading sight as a house full of intelligent men, watching with breathless anxiety, an ignorant brute, whom nature has endowed with physical powers far superior to ordinary beings, using his strength to disgrace another. At the lowest estimate SULLIVAN took away with him in the neighborhood of $15,000 hard cash. If that money had been put in circulation, i. e., if men had squandered their money to witness this poor apology for amusement, had used the same to pay their honest debts and kept the money in circulation in their own community, they would have been benefited by it. As it is, they will be the first ones to cry hard times, and they will use their voice with such effect that they will drown out those really deserving of notice and consideration. You may say what you please but until the American mind can grasp the situation more firmly, and learn what practical economy is, we shall have a class always with us who will sound the signal cry of distress, simply because they don't know enough to provide for a rainy day, and cannot understand the valuation of money. The young man of to-day, on a good salary will spend every cent he earns, and continually find himself in debt, because he cannot comprehend the earning power of money, or know its valuation. Until you can install in their minds the actual valuation of it there are thousands who will spend their last dollar to see a brutal prize-fight, and then cry hard times. No less, and 100 cents, no more and no less, and it takes 100 of them to make a dollar, and one dollar will buy seven pounds of sugar, four pounds of butter, and a hundred useful things about a household, providing you don't spend it to witness vulgar entertainments like the SULLIVAN combination,

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.
ED. REPORTER:—Junius says that he would like me to define Temperance. Temperance, according to Webster is Habitual moderation in the indulgence of the natural appetites and passions. Dio Lewis says in substance that alcohol is always injurious to the body of a healthy human being, and any natural appetite will hardly crave anything that is always injurious to the system. The report of the Massachusetts board of Charities says that four-fifths of the crime in the U. S. is caused by intemperance, and can it be that the framers of the Constitution made it contrary to the Constitution to suppress the cause of four-fifths of the crime in the U. S.? Sir Matthew Hale, England's great chief justice, said that four-fifths of the crime in England was caused by drinking alcoholic beverages. Does it abridge the privileges or immunities of a citizen of the U. S., to prohibit the cause of four-fifths of the crime in the U. S.? Senator Henry W. Blair says—it may be granted that license is a source of revenue to the state. So were indulgences for other crime in former ages; and the license of any single crime whatever is as justifiable as the license of the common cause of every crime. Senator Blair says that the liquor traffic is the common cause of every crime. Then does the Constitution furnish equal protection of the law? (Con. Art. 14, Sec. 1.) to all its citizens when it licenses the liquor traffic? No!! Judge Toney of the supreme court supported by all his associate judges, declared that there was nothing in the Federal Constitution or the laws of Congress to hinder any state prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. Junius refers to the English navy, "pike and shovel men," etc. Dio Lewis, referring to the work of Prof. Carpenter, which won the prize, before the British Parliament, for the best essay on the effect of alcoholic beverages upon English sailors and soldiers, says: Dr. Carpenter leaves not one hook on which to hang an honest doubt that alcoholic beverages are always a curse to the English sailor and soldier. Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, an eminent physician of Scotland says:—You will be told that alcohol is a food because it gives strength to the body and helps men and women to do more work. You know that alcohol is to lessen, by its action, the muscular power, and that carried a little too far it disables the muscles for work altogether, so that they cannot support the weight of the body; you know also from the experience of men who have performed great feats of strength and endurance, that such men have been obliged to abstain from alcohol completely in order to succeed in their efforts, and have beaten other men by reason of their careful abstinence. Both Dr. Richardson and Lieut. Schwatka have said that men will endure cold in the arctic regions better without than with alcohol.

Lieut. Schwatka said that he thought that the loss of former expeditions to the arctic regions was caused by the use of alcoholic beverages, and that his expedition endured as great a degree as any, and that the abstainers endured the extreme cold and fatigue better than the drinkers of alcoholic beverages.
