

The Yamhill County Reporter.

VOL. XXIV.

Entered at the Postoffice in McMinnville, as second class matter.

M'MINNIVILLE, OREGON, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1894.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE $2.50 PER YEAR.
One dollar if paid in advance. Single numbers five cents.

NO. 5.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.

Castoria allays Feverishness.

Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Card.

Castoria cures Diarrhea and Wind Colic.

Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.

Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulence.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbolic acid gas or poisonous air.

Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.

Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.

Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."

See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The facsimile signature of Chas H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

THE M'MINNIVILLE
National Bank

E. J. Qualey & Co.,
QUINCY, MASS.,
Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

GRANITE MONUMENTS AND ALL KINDS OF CEMETERY
FURNISHINGS

All work fully guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. Refer by personal call to Mr. Christy, Mrs. E. D. Fellow, Mr. E. D. Fellow.

Holl's Old Jewelry Stand, 3d Street.

IF YOU WANT FIRST-CLASS
FRUIT TREES OR OTHERS—

NURSERY STOCK AT LOWEST FIGURES

Write us for Special Prices. Catalogue Mailed Free.

Corvallis Nursery Co., Corvallis, Oregon

4103

Matthies Brothers, proprietors

CITY MARKET.

FRESH MEATS OF ALL KINDS.

CHOICEST IN THE MARKET.

South side Third St. between B and C

FROM

TERMINAL OR INTERIOR POINTS

THE . . .

NORTHERN

PACIFIC

RAILROAD

IS THE LINE TO TAKE

TO ALL POINTS EAST AND SOUTH.

It is the Dining Car Route.

It runs through Vestibuled Trains to

St. Paul. No Change of Cars. CHICAGO

Composed of DINING CARS unseparated. FULLMAN DRAWING ROOM SLEEPERS of latest equipment.

TOURIST SLEEPING CARS

Best can be constructed and in which accommodations are FREE and furnished for lodgers first and second-class tickets, and

ELEGANT DAY COACHES.

A continuous line, connecting with all lines, and three unseparated service Pullman sleeper reservations can be secured in advance through any agent of the road.

THE THOROUGH TICKETS to and from all points in America, England and Europe, at any ticket office of this road.

McMINNIVILLE

Truck and Dray Co.

COULTER & WRIGHT, Prop's.

Goods of all descriptions moved and careful handling guaranteed. Collections will be made monthly. Hauling of all kinds done cheap.

W. J. CLARK, D.D.S.
Graduate University of Mich.

Has opened an office in Union Block, Room 6, and is prepared to do all work in the dental line.

CROWN AND BRIDGE WORK A SPECIALTY.

LATEST METHOD OF PAINLESS EXTRACTION.

THE COMMERCIAL

LIVERY STABLE.

GATES & HENRY, Prop's.

Street, north of Third. Everything New and First-class. Complete stable and livery. Travels are specially kept and stabled by the hour of the month. We solicit a fair share of the local patronage.

FRANK ROECA,

Fashionable Tailor,

One Door West of Cigar Store. MCMINNIVILLE, OR.

THE WINTRY CORNFIELD.
Out in the cold field alone.
My tears run down, an my heart a stone.
Out in the cornfield all alone I stand.
A lone boy a-waiting for me.
But to the door comes a sacerdote stan';
Little Joe made it w' th' he own little han's—
Little Joe's hat on de 'sacerdote's hand.
Little Joe's jacket what de east' win's fade.

De rain been rough de tattered gear,
De rain come down, and de sleet an de snow.
Dat little boy git col, I fear!

De sharp little whittle my heart a stone.
I look an listen 'twich my heart a stone.
Little Joe sleep in de valle alone.
Right off he got his senses when he falls,
He's to turn the paper over and scatter it as wide as he can.
You understand?"

"Yes, sir! Yes, sir!"

"All right them. String out again."

He touched the big bay with the spur and the horse stopped abruptly.

With the horses in prime spirits, though mostly a little too fleshly for perfect condition, I had cared well for my horse. He was fit enough to wind and bind him. I was certainly the highest bidder in the market.

I was still thinking of the probability that I should get farther on the way than any comrade, except the lieutenant, or perhaps Crowley and Baden, whose horses were his.

But I heard Miller shout, "Forward, boys!"

Then the lieutenant told me it he told me in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man on guard before the command post. It was pretty late in the afternoon of a bright March day in 1865, but the parade ground was all red mud with shallow pools.

His rider never slowed till he brought his horse to his harness before the sentinel. Then they hurried out like bees from rows of hives, ran up the long screen of saplings stink on end side by side all around the acre or so occupied by the parade ground opposite the officers' quarters.

Then from the right side of the road a party, who must have been lying round his horse to his harness before the sentinel. They were in plain dress, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

Mr. Adam Baines, civil engineer, Boston, is a little gray at the temples, but still looks so young that few could suppose him to have served in the civil war. Indeed he was in the army less than a year. How he went out of it I told him in the following narrative:

As orderly from the direction of Meade's headquarters galloped into our parade ground and straight for the man