A MEMORY OF HORACE GREELEY

Kate Field has had a talk with Senator William E. Chandler of New Hampshire. A part of the conference is these paragraphs, in which amusing reminiscences of Horace Greeley are rehearsed:
William E. Chandler, of New Hampshire, might well be called the terrifying terror of the senate, his capacity for worrying the opposition and never relinquishing his grip being unique. Who has only seen him in his great act at the capitol would hardly recognize him in the bland and clever host, who dispenses turkey and stories with equal facility.

"Did you ever hear Horace Greeley swear?" asked Senator Chandler, as we sat before a wood fire one cold day.
"No; but I've often been told by his associates on the Tribune that his vocabulary of anathema was appalling fluent and never so lavishly expended as when matters were not to his liking in the office. They say that the contrast between his benevolent physiognomy and the blood-curdling outpourings of his tongue was most ludicrous. Nobody minded these onslaughts. It was Greeley's way."
"I heard Greeley swear twice. First, in 1868 when I occupied the unenviable position of secretary of the national republican committee. John Sherman had suggested paying the national debt in greenbacks, and the way our friend rent the air with choice English startled me, who was blown up for another man's sins. The second explosion occurred in 1869 on the night of Grant's second inaugural ball, given in the treasury building."

"Did Horace Greeley actually go to a ball?"
"Yes, and he met me there, I'm sorry to say. What a night of anguish that was! Probably never in the whole history of balls was there ever such a fiasco as that ball; and the awful part of it to me was the appearance of my name on the local committee."
"I suppose, like most persons on most committees, you had done nothing."
"Truth compels me to admit the hard impeachment. The gas refused to burn, and people went about in funeral gloom. No preparation had been made for the proper disposition of men's and women's hats and wraps, and the air was redolent of oaths. Those who arrived first had their hats and coats laid on the floor. When the floor gave out, Pelion was piled on Ossa, as it were, and on the presentation of checks, chaos set in. Attendants confounded confusion by wading through this black sea in search of submerged apparel which they failed to find. Then the wild animal, not too carefully concealed in my sex at best, broke loose and seized whatever hat or coat fitted and strode off, leaving a blue streak in his wake. Timidly climbing the stairs in the direction of the cloak-room, hoping to escape unobserved by irate members of the menagerie, I suddenly faced Horace Greeley hatless, with a silk handkerchief tied under his chin. Seizing me by the chest with both hands, this muscular christian gave me such a shaking as would have greatly benefited me had it been administered at the age of ten."

"Chandler" roared Greeley—then followed emphatic language including a word spelled with a big 'B'—"are you on the committee? By this time Greeley had shaken everything out of me, even the truth. Forgetting George Washington and his cherry tree, forgetting precepts learned at my mother's knee, I lied, yes, I did. Member of the committee? Certainly not." Then Greeley let me go and walked down stairs in a hurricane of a temper."
"Were you committed held responsible for loss?"
"We were obliged to employ counsel and make complainants write out their losses in full and swear to them, or we'd have been bankrupt. It was amazing how new and how expensive the lost articles grew as time wore on, and they were not forthcoming. The net receipts of the ball were about $8000. In order to protect ourselves from imposition, we announced that whatever sum of money remained in the treasury after satisfying demands would be given to the poor. Thus we were able to save about $1500 for charity. I have never been to an inaugural ball since that awful night."

Alaska will pay her way, even if the murderous greed of American and Canadian fishermen destroys the seal industry. For the past year the mines and salmon fisheries have yielded abundantly. Statistics show that people are actually immigrating into the territory of ice and prospering. Perhaps it will not be so much of a territory of ice, after all, when the facts about it begin to be known.

The "Grand Old Man" of the Colored Race.
There died February 20th, at his home near Washington, one of the most remarkable men of the time. Born a slave, treated as a slave until he reached his majority, and winning his way under the most adverse circumstances, Frederick Douglass became one of the most famous orators of his age, and the leader of his race in the United States. There was a prejudice against educating slaves, and Douglass acquired by stealth all the education he received as a young man. Later he was assisted by men like William Lloyd Garrison, and worked his way rapidly toward influence and prominence. He was the first colored man to speak before large audiences in the United States and England, and, as a living example of what slaves might become, exercised great influence in forming a public sentiment favorable to the slave and hostile to the slave power.

Mr. Douglass was a symmetrical character, free from the hatred and bitterness manifested by many of the early abolitionists, strong in argument and eloquent in speech. The people trusted him from the first, and those who were not unfriendly to slavery would listen to him when they would not listen to white men expressing the same sentiments. His good sense, tact and judgment made his aggressiveness seem to many a sort of pathetic earnestness, and he won the respect even of those who insisted on calling themselves his enemies.

Mr. Douglass was active as orator or editor from 1841 to the abolition of slavery, and after that date entered a career of usefulness as a public man, becoming probably the most conspicuous and most popular colored man in the United States. He was always a safe adviser for his race, and his paternal attitude toward the struggling freedmen was more than that of an anxious father than that of a leader. He had held several important trusts under the government, but had lived in retirement since his return from Hayti a few years ago. Mr. Douglass was nearly 80 years of age and was in good health up to almost the hour of his death. He was the "grand old man" of the colored race in America.

A Three Pupils School.
A report of an energetic district school master comes from an outlying district in Benton county. One day last autumn the county superintendent knocked at the door of the school house for admission, and after four or five distinct alarms had been sounded the door opened, and there stood the teacher, novel in hand. All of the seats were empty save one, and that was occupied by a single small boy. "Where are the rest of your pupils?" asked the superintendent. "Gone for a bucket of water," replied the teacher. The superintendent decided to wait for the rest of the school to come back so that he could visit them, and sat down. Time wore on and as he waited he figured out that from the amount of dirt on it, the floor had not been swept since school began. A three dollar clock hung on the wall, but a few days before a boy had poured a bottle of ink in it and the time could not be told. "Say, teacher, you didn't have me recite between recess and noon," sang out the boy in the corner. "Yes, I did," said the teacher, but the superintendent knew that the little fellow told the truth and that the pedagogue wanted the fact concealed. After fifty minutes passed the rest of the school returned with its bucket of water. There were only two of them and they with the boy in the corner made three, the total attendance at the school, where recitations waited until interest in the novel subsided. The school began with sixteen, but no wonder that it dwindled to three before the term ended.—Corvallis Times.

American armor plate is receiving ample recognition abroad. The fact that the Russian government has ordered the Bethlehem Iron company to supply enough for two battleships speaks for itself. This is as high a compliment as could be paid to American skill and inventive genius. The order will bring nearly $4,000,000 of Russian gold into the United States.

OREGON NEWS AND NOTES.

A plow factory is talked of for Forest Grove.
Eleven ladies of Corvallis have organized a cornet band.
A pet bear at The Dalles has awakened with a good appetite after a sleep of two months.
Pendleton has a new semi-monthly paper called Chinooks. The editor says it is a humorous one.

The intention is to have the motor line from Portland to Hillsboro completed by August 1st. Right of way is being secured.
The committee which has been investigating the records of Baker county have reached the conclusion that the county is $270,000 in debt, although they have not finished their investigations, and the exact amount may exceed that sum.
A peculiar theft was perpetrated in Marion county recently. Two unknown persons went into Frank Eagon's hopyard, built a fire, and dug up roots most of the night, taking several thousand roots and hauling them away before daylight.

A case of smallpox was discovered at The Dalles Saturday morning. Samuel Monahan, who recently arrived from the east, is the sufferer. The doctors pronounce it genuine smallpox, and have quarantined the hotel where the sick man has lodgings.

Governor Lord's executive clemency was exercised for the first time in remitting the fine of Frank Farris, who had been sentenced to 12 days in the Marion county jail for carrying a concealed weapon. The illness of the man's little children who needed the father's care, moved the governor to remit.
At a meeting of the Grand Army council of administration for the department of Oregon held at Oregon City on the 25th, the date for holding the state encampment of the G. A. R. was changed from May 8th and 9th to June 17th and 18th. The change was made to make possible the attendance of the grand commander.

The last census report shows 63,791 families in Oregon; 29,400 own property free from debt, and 9,992 incumbered, and 24,399 families hire property. The percentage is: owing, 16.75, hiring, 32.25. Only ten states exceed the percentage on ownership; 74.53 per cent own property free from incumbrance and 25.37 incumbered property.
The S. P. Co. has just received from the locomotive works at Schenectady, N. Y., two of the heaviest locomotives in the world. They weigh nearly 200,000 lbs. each, and are to be used on steep mountain grades. The tender of each carries 4,000 gallons of water, and when loaded with fuel, weighs 81,000 lbs. The boilers measure 72 inches in diameter, large enough for a six-foot man to walk through erect, and contain over 300 lbs.

Washington is one-fourth larger than England and contains 400,000 people to England's 27,000,000. Oregon is three times larger than Scotland, but the latter has twenty times the population. If California was as thickly populated as Massachusetts, it would contain the present population of the United States, and if the Union was as densely filled as England it would have a population equal to the number of people on the earth.

The controller of the currency has declared another dividend of 10 per cent in favor of the Linn County National bank. This makes a total of 75 per cent. The other 25 per cent will also come, with some over for the stockholders. It is an interesting fact, and one creditable to the receiver as well as to the debtors of the bank, that this record leads all the banks of the United States, that failed in 1893, so far as can be learned, no other bank yet having paid 75 per cent.

The Ashland mine, the best exposition of developed quartz mining in southern Oregon, is in the hands of a receiver. Not, however, on account of the failure of the ore, but through strife among the members of the company, who have not been on speaking terms half the time the past several months. Before the company became embarrassed, which was caused by the great expense of tunneling, the mine was producing $80,000 per month. The indebtedness is $9,000.
A Washington, D. C., dispatch says: Although everybody speaks in the highest terms of McBride, yet the loss to Oregon is everywhere commented upon. Already Dolph's place on the foreign relations committee is parcelled out to Wolcott of Colorado, a senator opposed to the Nicaragua canal. His place on commerce will go to either Squire or Wilson, of Washington, and the chairmanship of public lands, which Dolph would have had when the republicans shall reorganize the senate, will go to Dubois of Idaho.

Senator Mitchell has been making a fight for the amount due Oregon from the United States for money paid as costs, charges and expenses in putting down the rebellion. The sum claimed, and which has been adjudged proper several times by the various committees on claims, is $335,152. California has a like claim, amounting to about $4,000,000. Nevada a claim of over $400,000. Several fights have been made for this, but as usual the government of the United States is rather delinquent in paying claims.

Governor Lord made the following appointments Thursday: Regents of the state agricultural college—W. E. Yates, of Corvallis; H. B. Miller, of Grants Pass; Benton Killin, of Portland. Regents Monmouth normal school—Benjamin Schofield, A. Nottner and O. F. Paxton, of Portland. Regent Weston state normal school—W. G. Lyon, of Helix. Brigadier-general Oregon National Guard—Charles F. Beebe, of Portland. Trustees Oregon Soldiers Home—S. B. Ormsby, of Argenti; B. F. Alley, of Florence; William Galloway, of McMinnville; John P. Robertson, of Salem; Henry Rust, of Baker City.

Typewriters and Trotters.
One of the striking features of the past ten years in this country is the development respectively of speed in the trotter and typewriter. A generation ago a three-minute horse was a very good one indeed. The best time of Flora Temple was 2:19 in 1850. When Nancy Hanks appeared on the scene with her mile in 2:04, it was thought trotting had reached its climax. Now little Alix has trotted her mile in 2:03, and Robert J. has paced his in 2:01. The two-minute horse is confidently predicted for the end of this century.

As with the trotter, so with the typewriter. The first great acceleration of speed was made when it became possible for nimble-fingered young women to take direct on the typewriter from dictation without the intervention of shorthand notes. It is not very uncommon now to find an expert who can manipulate the writing machine at the rate of 115 words a minute, the rate which a few years ago was thought to be good speed for the shorthand note taker.

To-day there are typewriters who are equal to ticking off 160 words a minute for a short time. This necessitates 16 letters a second. It is a tremendous speed, which has been accomplished partly by improved mechanical appliances on the machines themselves, partly by development of mental and muscular quickness in the operator. The fingers become so educated to touching certain keys that there is a species of memory developed in them.

Asbestos belongs to that class of materials that are year by year finding their way into new uses. It is already used in paints, roofing and building materials as a non-conductor of heat, for steam packing, for fire-proof cements, for tubing, for shovels, fork tines, cloth, rugs, cord and sewing thread. Asbestos in the household is just beginning its career of usefulness. It is now made into floor bricks, stove polishers, mats, flat-iron rests and for baking paper. It will come in time, no doubt, to furnish fire-proof handles, aprons, carpets and a dozen other things.

In these days of telephone, telegraph, electricity and steam, people cannot afford to wait days or as many hours for relief. This is our reason for offering you One Minute Cough Cure. Neither days, nor hours, nor even minutes elapse before relief is afforded. Rogers Bros.
