IF WE ONLY COULD.

There's a question that often comes up in my mind,
As to whether it's neighborly, christian and kind
To think of our friends as we do;
And to make such remarks as we commonly use
About other folks' business, their actions and views,
As life's daily course they pursue

I wonder so many times, whether, if we,
Were placed in positions our friends seem to be,
Should we act as they think we should do?
And whether we'd do what they thought would be right,
Let circumstances bind us however they might,
When we try to be honest and true.

Perchance were we thrown in a similar place,
Where we thought the deeds of our friends a disgrace,
We should judge from a fresh point of view;
And perhaps we should act just precisely the same,
And consider we did nothing worthy of blame,
Whatever results might accrue.

Then let us reflect, and in future when we Hear of deeds that commence "Just between you and me,"
And beware lest we catch the infection,
Let us take it for granted we hear but one side
Of a tale, about which we could better decide
If we knew all the facts in connection.

Now, if we could do so, t'were much better to say,
(When the tale bearers come to us day after day
With some news they have lately discovered)
"We don't wish to hear it;" pay no heed to such stuff,
O'er their heads those poor people would feel sure enough
A good angel one minute had hovered,

And had also recorded to us a good deed,
We had done a good turn for a friend much in need,
And had helped deal a death blow to slander;
For if none would listen, scandalmongers would cease,
They would turn their long sword tongues into sickles of peace
And enlist with a better commander.

THE MANITOBA SCHOOL ISSUE.

Now that the legislature of Manitoba has reassembled, the eyes of everyone in the Dominion of Canada are turned toward Winnipeg, to await its action in the matter of the answer to be made to the order of the Dominion government concerning separate schools for Roman Catholics. The circumstances of the case are so little known that a brief resume of them may be useful in order that the action which the Manitoba government shall take may be clearly understood.

Before Manitoba was admitted as a province into the Canadian confederation the vast majority of the people were of the Catholic faith. It was expressly stated in the constitution that it should be permitted to run its Catholic parochial schools at the expense of the public funds. That is to say, the denominational system of education prevails in Manitoba the same as in England to-day. The non-sectarian system, as the public school system of the United States is known, is not found there. Any denomination, Catholic, Protestant or Jewish, can be started when the standard of excellence reaches the grade required by law, and the school is supported out of the public fund.

At the time Manitoba became a province nearly all the denominational schools were Catholic, and were supported by the public in general. But after the country became a province the immigration of protestants set in, and the influx soon became so great that trouble arose over the school question, for the protestants object to allowing the Catholic parochial schools to be supported out of the public treasury, and demand that a public school system shall be established similar to that of the United States.

The anti-Catholic element finally got control of the Manitoba government, and proceeded to carry out their ideas, cutting off the Catholic parochial schools from public support. The Catholics appealed to the Dominion government at Ottawa and after much haggling, and the reference of the matter to the Imperial government at London, which referred it back to Ottawa, the latter issued an order on March 21st last, setting forth that the Roman Catholics of Manitoba have a right to build, maintain and equip, manage, conduct and support Roman Catholic separate schools in a manner provided by the statute, which was repealed by the province in 1890. The Roman Catholics have also a right under the order to share proportionately in any grant made out of the public funds for the purpose of education. The Roman Catholics who contribute to separate schools are exempted from the payment of public moneys to other schools. And the Manitoba government was directed to carry out this order.

Premier Gneenway, of Manitoba, decided to play a waiting game. He adjourned the legislature, in the belief that the Dominion parliament would again deal with the matter. But so far it has not taken it up, and the Manitoba legislature is again in session, and the matter must now come to a head. All the signs point to a most energetic refusal to obey the order of the Dominion government, and that Premier Greenway will dissolve the legislature and appeal to the people in a new election to indorse his refusal.—Toledo Blade.

The Alaskan Gold Regions.

Last season's yield of gold from the Yukon River district in Alaska was about $249,000, according to an estimate gathered from miners and business men in the district by the Alaska News. The returns are undoubtedly big, but the labor of getting the gold, as described by one of the oldest miners in the region, is very great. The Yukon district is remarkably difficult of access, and a great many adventurers who have started hopefully from Juneau have failed even to get near the gold region. It is an expensive journey, too. Then the character of the gold mining and the limitations under which it must be done have sent many fairly experienced miners back in despair.

In many districts the gold-bearing rock is twenty or more feet below the surface, and shafts must be sunk to that depth through ground frozen solid and by a most laborious process. The prospect holes are usually about three and a half feet wide by six feet long. Enough wood must be cut to cover this space, and a rousing fire be kept up for almost a whole day before the ground is sufficiently thawed for the miner to get out about a foot or a foot and a half of gravel and soil. The work can be done only when all the surface water is frozen, otherwise it would drain into the prospect hole. In this region wells have been sunk seventy-five feet or more, all through frozen ground, and the miners say they never got below the frost line.

In other districts the work can be done only in the brief summer, from the middle of May until about the middle of September, about ninety days. In these regions the ground is not frozen so deep, and the gravel and soil can be washed from the bed rock. Flumes must be built from the creeks and the water conducted to the claims. The bed rock is from ten to twenty-three feet below the surface, and all the overlying soil must be washed away before the gold is accessible. A working supply of water is rarely obtainable for more than ninety days of the year. Usually almost two entire seasons are consumed in this preliminary work before a sight of the gold is obtained and the miner must have money as well as pluck to keep him going until he strikes pay gravel. The gravel needs to be remarkably rich to compensate for the arduous and tedious labor of reaching it.

When the claims are worked by burning prospect holes in the winter, hot water is needed for washing the gravel when it is obtained. Usually when the gold-bearing gravel has been reached the returns have been handsome. Along Miller creek in the past season or two the yield has averaged as much as $1 or $1.50 a pan, and claims staked out two or three years ago are now held at prices varying from $2000 to $20,000 each.

The extent of the gold belt of northwest Alaska and the Canadian northwest territory is still a matter of speculation. From the information brought by prospectors it is believed that the belt covers a district from seventy-five to a hundred miles wide, commencing on the head waters of the Hootalinqua river, in British Columbia, and following closely the course of the Yukon river to and beyond the Arctic Circle, a distance of about nine hundred miles. It is probable that dozens of tributary streams, as yet unmapped, many doubtless unknown, are rich in gold and silver. The vast region is practically unexplored. The mining at present going on is but nibbling on the edge of the rich region. But when the gold and silver mines are systematically opened up, it will be a region for the capitalist and not for the individual miner. The ground must be exceptionally rich in gold to pay one or two miners working for themselves. With capital large districts could be worked in a systematic way and big profits realized. From all accounts, that is how the Yukon gold and silver region will be made to give up its riches.

W. T. Sanford, station agent of Leeper, Clarion Co., Pa., writes: I can recommend One Minute Cough Cure as the best I ever used. It gave instant relief and a quick cure. Rogers Bros.

FROM THE COUNTY PRESS.

The Swedish ladies' quartette returned last Friday, and will spend the summer in our city.

A music class of twenty members has been organized here by Mrs. Buchanan.

The result of a day's angling at Meadow lake last Saturday by C. W. Eitlegeorge and James Page was 50 trout and a large salmon.

Miss Ollie Stott, who left this city on the 4th inst. for New York, has arrived there safely and will spend the summer.

Rev. Rounds delivered his farewell sermon to the M. E. congregation here last Sunday evening. The presiding elder will appoint a minister upon the work until conference meets.

The new dog tax law seems to be doing good work. One of the city fathers has put his dog out on pasture for the summer. The city loses the tax, to be sure, but there is one less dog in town.

Newberg barbers have decided to close their places of business on Sunday. A barber is human and wants to rest on Sunday, the same as other people, and there is no reason why he should keep open shop on Sunday.

Paul Macy says that he has been hearing that times are improving east, but the first positive assurance he has had that such is the case, came to him this week. He received a letter from his brother-in-law in Iowa, and with the letter came twenty cents, with the information that the money was from a man who said he had owed Mr. Macy that amount some ten or fifteen years. Paul says he don't remember the man but he is convinced that times are improving in Iowa or else revival meetings are being held in that part of the vineyard.

The school board held a meeting on Wednesday night and elected the following teachers for the public school for next year, viz: Principal J. C. Hodson, with assistants in the order named, Miss Ella Macy, Miss Josie Shearer, Miss Ethel Cutts, Miss Rena Townsend and Miss Maggie Inglis. All the teachers selected have taught in the school before and have given good satisfaction as competent instructors. Miss Rena Townsend, whose home is at Fountain City, Ind., will be remembered by many Newberg people. She is a neice of Mrs. Ella Hartley, and she taught in the public school here one year some three years ago.

Amity Blade.

It is thought the campmeeting to be given here will begin about the 10th of June and continue two or three weeks. Revs. Boyd and Pettijohn of Newberg, the principal instigators of the movement, are of the Free Methodist society, under whose auspices the meeting is to be given.

Printing material belonging to J. B. Long was taken to Ocean Park near Woods this week, where Claude LeMasters and A. H. Malaney, the latter owner of Ocean Park, will soon start a newspaper. The park is a developing coast resort and the paper will materially assist in putting it to the front. We wish the venture success.

Yamhill Independent.

It seems to us that it would be eminently more fitting for the people of Oregon to raise a $10,000 good roads fund than to give that much for a "memorial" to the battleship Oregon.

It is announced that "ex-congressman J. F. Bryant," whoever he may be, has by the most strenuous effort of Hon. Jeff Myers been secured to divert the attention of the people from the race horses and big pumpkins at the state fair this fall. The subjects upon which he will talk will be "Taxation" and "Bimetalism," both of which subjects are supposed to be of interest to the people of Oregon.

Valley Times.

A young child of N. Walls came near crossing the dark river last Tuesday by drinking a quantity of iodine.

After the failure of the proposed telephone line from Portland to Salem via. this place, Mr. Boivin promptly made up his mind that the project should not be a failure, and he is daily looking for the phones and wire from the east, and when they arrive a force of men will be put to work and wires will be strung from every house, and the town overhead will look like one large spider web, the wires will be so thick.

What Immigration Costs.

There is one aspect of the immigration question that appeals purely to business men. The social and moral influences on the American people of the unrestrained horde of Europeans pouring upon our shores are, of course, the most important, but the heavy tax in money thus levied upon the American people is not to be disregarded.

According to the last census, in addition to those of foreign parentage, the persons of foreign birth supported at the public charge of the people of the United States were divided as follows: Insane, 35,300; criminal, 15,932; pauper, 27,648; total, 78,880.

The average annual cost of a pauper, a lunatic or a prisoner in the conservative and economically managed public institutions of Massachusetts is one hundred and fifty dollars.

The annual cost, then, of maintaining this standing army of foreign born vagabonds is not less than $11,832,000.

If to this could be added the expense of maintaining the American born children of foreign paupers, vagabonds, and criminals, the figures would be even more startling, but unfortunately the figures on parentage are defective.—Commercial Bulletin.

Capt. John Brown, Jr., who died at his island home in lake Erie recently, at the age of 74, was the oldest of the twenty children of John Brown who led the forlorn hope against slavery at Harper's Ferry. It was John Brown the younger, who conceived the idea of the removal of the family to Kansas, and he was captain of an anti-slavery company there when Lawrence was burned in 1857. When the demonstration at Harper's Ferry occurred in 1859 he was in Canada, having been sent there by his father to enlist a company of fugitive slaves for secret armed service in Maryland. The elder Brown's plans were betrayed by an Englishman whom he had trusted, so the blow had to be struck sooner than was intended and at a different place. But for this incident father and son would probably have been executed together. The younger Brown served in a Kansas regiment in the civil war until disabled, and spent his later years in farming. John Brown's brothers and sons were all inflexibly devoted to his views and shared his plans, and they form a remarkable family group in American history.

THE ORCHID FAD.

The quaint, brilliant, and most uncanny orchid is the flower of the hour for weddings and other notable functions, and is achieving the popularity which its enthusiastic admirers have long predicted for it. Everything about orchids is fascinating, and much curious and interesting information is given in a charming paper in the June number of Demorest's Magazine, "Some White House Orchids;" and it is beautifully illustrated by over a score of reproductions from photographs taken, by special permission of Mrs. Cleveland, in the White House conservatories, which depict some of the gems of the noted collection. Another interesting and handsomely illustrated article is "The Indians of the Empire State;" and some of the peculiarities of that curiosity of the animal kingdom the burro are exploited in an article entitled "How a Burro Discovered Creede," which is embellished with a number of portraits of the peculiar little beast. "Should International Marriages be Denounced?" is the interesting question discussed in a symposium of society women, lawyers, clergymen, and authors, and some very unique opinions are given. The story matter is bright and suggestive; in Sanitarian, a splendid article is "The Bones and Muscles: Their Relations to Symmetry and Deformity," in which some helpful hints about preserving symmetry are given. Household has a paper on marketing, with illustrations of the different cuts of beef; and all the other departments are, as usual, replete with interesting and helpful matter. This popular "all-around" family magazine is furnished for only $2 a year. Office of publication, 15 East 14th Street, New York.
