The nearer you keep to indulging in any sport for the love of the sport, the nearer you keep to the true meaning of the word amateur." Purely amateur sport, whether riding the wheel, running, boxing or rowing, is a good thing, and healthy people always will encourage it by appreciation and patronage, but the world has very little use for the professional sport, who is classed as an idler, a sort of excrescence, and is generally associated with the criminal classes. No young man should let his fondness for amateur sport control him to the neglect of legitimate work and study. They go well together.
