THE ADVANCE OF MEDICAL SCIENCE.

The address of Sir Russell Reynolds, as president, at the opening of the recent annual meeting of the British Medical Association, commanded the earnest attention of a scientific audience. At the same time it was well calculated to interest every hearer or reader, whether belonging to the medical profession or not. Especially was this true of those portions of it dealing with germ diseases and the methods of dealing with them, and with the vast advancement made in recent years in bringing the forces of life to bear against the inroads of disease and death. This advancement, indeed, represents the most important achievements of the profession. Nothing has happened in the last twenty years, said Sir Russell, comparable with the new revelations of the potency and prepotency of life, in life in health, and in disease and treatment. These comprise not only the power and functions of hitherto unappreciated organs, but also the vast parts played by the innumerable multitudes of germs of various kinds, with which the whole world teems.

The theory of germ diseases is, Sir Russell holds, by no means new. How ancient it is in some rudimentary form it would be rash to try to tell. Nor is the correlative theory of germ cures new. In earliest ages there was at least a faint glimmering of its wondrous truth, in what we have perhaps too contemptuously reckoned mere superstitions and old-wives' fables. What is our latest medical science, the science of Pasteur and Koch, but a triumphant expansion of the old principle of "taking the hair of the dog that has bitten you"? But we may be getting even beyond the germ cure itself. If living organisms of higher forms contain within themselves potency for killing, surely they may contain within themselves potency for healing. Of all the agents of destruction, said Sir Russell, the most violent have been derived from living things, from the animal and vegetable kingdoms rather than from the mineral. This fact has led to many fantastic beliefs and practices in therapeutics. There have been those who reckoned that the ailment of any organ might be cured by administering to the patient a similar but healthy organ of another man or animal. This theory was not altogether wrong. In some important respects it has been vindicated. The medical world is to-day contemplating the possibility, and the probability, too, not merely of curing a disease but of rendering one being immune against disease by introducing into its organism a healthy constituent of the body of another. If fully confirmed, this will be the greatest triumph yet recorded in the realm of therapeutic and preventive medicine.

Nothing could appeal more strongly to the imagination than the turning of a poison of a disease against the disease itself, unless it be the flooding, in life and health, the elements of cure and immunity from morbid attacks. And that is just what medical science is to-day doing. It would, said Sir Russell Reynolds, be absurd to say in what this potency of life exists. It is enough to recognize its existence, rejoice in its marvelous energy, and anticipate still more from our investigations of its modes of actions. "Another eminent scientist has said: 'Search while we may with eyes, however aided and however earnest, that which we call life eludes our search and resists our efforts. We must be content with what knowledge we can gain, secure or insecure; and while using it as best we may, should realize in all humility how much there is we cannot know—and yet we cannot doubt.'—N. Y. Tribune.

Small Beginnings
Make great endings sometimes. Ailments that we are apt to consider trivial often grow, through neglect, into atrocious maladies, dangerous in themselves and productive of others. It is the disregard of the earlier indications of ill health which leads to the establishment of all sorts of maladies on a chronic basis. Moreover, there are certain disorders incident to the season, such as malaria and rheumatism, against which it is always desirable to fortify the system after exposure to the conditions which produce them. Cold, damp and miasma are surely counteracted by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. After you have incurred risks from these influences, a wineglassful or two of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters directly afterward should be swallowed. For malaria, dyspepsia, liver complaint, kidney and bladder trouble, nervousness and debility it is the most deservedly popular of remedies and preventives. A wineglassful before meals promotes appetite.

The mathematical editor of an exchange proposes the following query: A boy ten years old has a little sister who weighs 16 pounds and he gets tired holding her in five minutes. When he is twice as old, how long will it take him to get tired holding some one's sister who weighs 125 pounds?

A VEHICLE TAX.

The proposition to place a specific tax upon all vehicles, including bicycles, the proceeds to go to the road fund, is being discussed in many sections of this country. Several European countries have a direct tax on vehicles, and in France over $400,000 was received during the past year from the tax on bicycles alone, the rate being $2 for each wheel. The number of bicycles, buggies, wagons, etc., is so large in the United States that even a small tax would yield a sum large enough to greatly help the work of improving the highways.

As a matter of justice a vehicle tax is one of the fairest of methods for raising funds to keep the roads in repair. It is right the property owners should stand the expense of building the roads, but it is not just that the roads should be kept in repair by a property tax. It is well known that a large number of vehicle owners never pay a cent of tax, their exemptions relieving them of this duty, yet they are among the principal users of the highways, and in many instances, like wood haulers, wear out the roads far more than any reasonable tax would repair. As to a vehicle tax being a burden to our wood haulers or any other class of teamsters, be they ever so poor, it can not be so, for if the roads were kept in proper repair they would save each year in horse flesh and wagon repairs more than enough to cover their tax.

The number of bicycles and buggies kept for pleasure is very large, and with a better system of highways the number would soon be doubled. Yet there is not an owner of one of these vehicles but what would be glad to contribute to the road fund, if he was certain his money would be so expended as to enable him to take more comfort and pleasure when out for a ride.

The tax should not be so high as to be a burden on any one, but it could be so adjusted that all would pay in proportion to the amount of wear their vehicle caused to the roads. A fair schedule would be for bicycles to pay a tax of $1 per year, single-seated buggies $1.50, double-seated rigs and light spring wagons $1.75, heavy spring wagons and light farm wagons $2, while all larger vehicles should pay a basis rate of $2, and 25 cents for each additional quarter inch added to the size of the axle above a three-and-a-quarter inch standard. At this rate the vehicles in Clackamas county would yield each year a sum sufficiently large to do much toward keeping our roads in repair so that they would be passable at all times of the year.—Oregon City Enterprise.

Diarrhoea should be stopped promptly. It soon becomes chronic. DeWitt's Colic and Cholera Cure is effective, safe and certain. Hundreds of testimonials bear witness to the virtue of this great medicine. It can always be depended upon, for it saves time and money. Rogers Bros.

The Hebrew Tongue.
Probably one of the strangest facts in the history of language is the resurrection of the Hebrew to life and activity as the language of a people and country, after its death, which occurred 2250 years ago. The Jews who returned from the exile were a small people and they were compelled to learn and employ the Aramic, the language of the country, so that the Hebrew was disused excepting by the priests, as the Latin now is by the Catholics. But the language was preserved in the old testament scriptures and it was taught that the scriptures might be understood, and this has been continued till the present day. Now the Jews are returning to Palestine from Russia, Poland, Germany, Italy, Spain and other countries, and cannot understand each other in these diverse languages, but they all understand the Hebrew of the old testament and employ it, so that Hebrew is again the language of the common people, and is heard in the marts of trade in common use. The Hebrews of Palestine employ it exclusively in their families, so that it has become again the mother tongue. In Jerusalem it died; and in the same city, after so many centuries it has come to life again. As was to be expected, the pronunciation varies, but this is corrected in accordance with the Arabic and other Semitic dialects. There is something marvelous in this restoration of not only the people, but the language which they had practically lost five hundred years before their dispersion.—The Interior.

The Utah Riddle.

Judge Smith at Ogden has decided that the women of legal age and qualifications in Utah are entitled to vote on the matter of the adoption of the new state constitution. As we understand it, however, this is not necessarily a finality, as the judgment can be taken up on appeal.

The question raised is an interesting one. Women formerly voted in Utah, but the Edmunds act deprived them of the privilege, presumably to reduce the Mormon power at the polls at that time. The act of congress enabling Utah to take the necessary steps to statehood provides for the framing of a constitution which is to be adopted or rejected by "the qualified voters of said proposed state," which language is ambiguous in not declaring whether women are voters or not.

Under this act a state constitution has been framed which provides for woman suffrage. Of course this instrument is not yet operative, but the women claim they have the right to vote on its adoption. This contention has been upheld by Judge Smith. The matter may lead to considerable delay in the admission of Utah, for, if the election should result in a republican victory, which all the indications favor, the matter of women voting on the adoption of the state constitution will be brought up in congress by the democrats, to delay the admission of the state and the seating of two additional republican senators, thus giving the control of the United States senate to that party.—Toledo Blade.

"A Sock Dologer."

Here is a good yarn with a moral to it which is going the rounds credited to the Baker City Democrat.

"A few weeks ago a young man from McEwee bought a pair of socks containing a note saying the writer was an employee of the Kenosha, Wis., knitting works and wanted a good husband. She gave her name, and requested the buyer, if unmarried, to write with a view of matrimony. The young man who found the note considered the matter in all its phases, and then decided to write to the girl. He did. After waiting with anxiety he was at last rewarded with a curt letter, stating that the girl was the mother of two children and had been married four years, and the letter had been written ever so long ago. It was a 'sock dologer,' and the young man hunted for solution. He found it. The merchant of whom he bought the socks didn't advertise."

A good many of the prune growers of the Pacific northwest have been misled into believing that Italian prunes will sell for a higher price per pound than French (Pette) prunes of the same size. The fact is that for the past year Italian prunes running between forty and fifty to the pound have sold at from a cent and a quarter to two cents per pound less than the French prunes of the same size.—Rural Northwest.

One of the laws passed at the recent session of the Massachusetts legislature requires that manual training be incorporated in the high school system of the twenty cities in the state with a population exceeding 20,000 each. These cities contain 1,300,000 people, so that the new law provides manual training for half the population of the state. Boston had already recognized the importance of giving school children instruction in the mechanical arts and sciences that are so extensively employed in the industries of Massachusetts.

A recent report by the compiler of vital statistics in Massachusetts, gives some very interesting facts. It is shown that of 203 persons who died in the ten years preceding 1891 at the age of 100 years or over, 153 were females. The number of females living over 80 years is nearly double that of males. The greater exposure of men to the elements and to accidents tends to shorten life in the aggregate. It is also a peculiar fact that men commit suicide in about a three-fold ratio. It is also noted that the women who attain a great age have almost without exception been mothers of large families.

A preacher came at a newspaper man in this way: "You editors dare not tell the truth. If you did you could not live; your newspaper would be a failure." The editor replied: "You are right; and the minister who will at all times under all circumstances tell the whole truth about his members, alive or dead, will not occupy his pulpit more than one Sunday, and then he will find it necessary to leave town in a hurry. The press and the pulpit go hand in hand with whitewash brushes and pleasant words, magnifying little virtues into big ones. The pulpit, the pen and the gravestone are the great saint-making triumvirate." And the minister went away looking very thoughtful, while the editor turned to his work and told of the surpassing beauty of the bride, while in fact she was as homely as a hedge fence.

Reader, did you ever take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR, the "KING OF LIVER MEDICINES"? Everybody needs take a liver remedy. It is a sluggish or diseased liver that impairs digestion and causes constipation, when the waste that should be carried off remains in the body and poisons the whole system. That dull, heavy feeling is due to a torpid liver. Biliousness, Headache, Malaria and Indigestion are all liver diseases. Keep the liver active by an occasional dose of Simmons' Liver Regulator and you'll get rid of these troubles, and give tone to the whole system. For a laxative Simmons' Liver Regulator is BETTER THAN PILLS. It does not grip, nor weaken, but greatly refreshes and strengthens.

"What a lovely cow," Uncle James," said a Boston girl, the morning after her arrival, "and how comically she shakes her head." "Yes, but don't get too near that cow," cautioned the uncle, "he's an ugly critter."
