Marche and the Louvre-dear to the of the colossal establishments in New were confronted with the question, DENVER "How shall we organize the 'meal women?"

In France "lunch," as understood in America, is unknown. Every person, gentle and simple, makes of the early morning repast simply a "break-fast" and no more. A bowl of coffee and a large piece of crisp bread for the workingman and woman; the smoking chocolate in a Sevres cup and the brioches which melt in the mouth for the millionaire-those are the only distinctions. For many generations the French have recognized that it is unhealthy to take a hearty meal at 6, 7 or 8 in the morning. So they wait until 11 or 12, and millions wait until 1 o'clock before tasting the first substantial meal of the day. Dinner, a second meal of two or three courses, and in no wise resembling the light repast which Americans know as supper," comes at 7, 8 or even 9, according to the circumstances of the person. Concierges, or house porters, gen-
