Henry Austin, who returned from Little Nestucca recently informs the Graphic that the settlers over there are working like beavers for a new road which is to be free. The Head-light says of the road, "A large force of men are working on the Slab Creek road. This will give settlers of the Little Nestucca a free road to the valley, the only road leading from the county to the valley which is not a toll road. Part of the road is built, and there is only six miles to build to connect with the Salmon river road. It is on the lowest pass in the county, and will be the best route as it is mostly through an open country. It will be ready for travel this fall."
