The lecture by Hon. D. C. Herrin Saturday night, on the advantages of being a Workman, was largely attended, and the speaker gave a good address. The chart illustrating the new classified assessment plan is Mr. Herrin's own invention, and is so clear an exposition of the superiority of the plan over that of all other beneficiary orders, that the people not identified with it are unable to gainsay its fairness or ultimate triumph over other plans of assessment. The orchestra enlivened the evening with music, and the selection by the ladies' quartette of the Baptist church was so good that a second appearance was insisted upon.

About a dozen arose, some of them long-time church members. The evangelist said: "Why, God bless you, there's no such book in the bible!" The following is from the Yreka Journal of the 4th inst.: "Dan Kingery and A. J. Hay, who have been prospecting a quartz claim in the hill above the old R. H. Campbell mine at Quartz Valley, struck exceedingly good pay this week. They washed a painful of gravel and loose decomposed quartz from the side of the ledge and realized $15. The quartz shows gold in great quantity to the naked eye, and is estimated to yield $20,000 or more to the ton, with ledge over two feet wide as far as tested. Even if a pocket, the young men will realize a good fortune from what is in sight."

A Pleasing Recital.

At the opera house Friday night, though the audience was not large, Mrs. John Evenden's pupils, Miss Pearl Smith of Portland and Miss Virginia Spencer of this city, gave a most pleasing entertainment, the former as pianist, the latter as vocalist. Both young women were very prettily attired, Miss Smith in cream dress with red sash and bouquet, and Miss Spencer with light blue skirt and bodice of deeper blue, with handsome garnishment of red roses. Miss Smith is a player of five years' experience, over three of which have been under Mrs. Evenden's tuition, and that lady is justly proud of the wonderful skill developed by her pupil. Miss Smith is an Oregon girl by birth, and her instruction has all been received at home. She has never received European instruction as has been reported, neither has her training suffered from this fact. She has wonderful facility in hand and finger movement, and a memory rarely equaled, playing nearly a dozen difficult selections without portfolio. Miss Spencer, likewise, sang an equal number of pieces from memory. The frequent encores given her attest stronger than words the appreciation of her singing. The best vocal selections in the opinion of the writer were "When Love is Kind," "Cradle Song," "Violet" and "Four Leaf Clover." The best instrumental was "Etude E Major" by Chopin, "In the Springtime," by Greig and "Murmuring Zephyrs," by Jensen.
