FRIDAY, AUGUST 19, 1898.

It may be three months before the war department completes a correct list of the killed and wounded in the Santiago battle.

The late war is the shortest of the great wars of the century, except the Italian war of 1859, and that between Prussia and Austria in 1896.

An exchange says Admiral Dewey is famous in another respect: Years ago he had a surgical operation performed on him, and survived it. A part of his liver was removed.

Strogo efforts are being made to induce the Prince of Wales to visit this country next spring. It is believed that the visit would strengthen the love affair that has developed between John Bull and Columbia.

The report of the surrender of Manila is fully confirmed. The American loss in the engagement is given at 6 killed and about 39 wounded, that of the Spaniards not being known. 7000 prisoners were taken.

The Spanish-American war will go down into history as the 100-days' war. It was just one hundred days from the time war was declared until Spain sued for peace. The war of a hundred days is also noted in French history.

It is now known everywhere that Americans will "call their bluff." Consequently it is safe to predict that this country will have no more war in a great many years. The nations of the earth will have a more wholesome respect for America than ever before.

A Georgia paper asked Mr. Bryan if the free silver sentiment was increasing or declining, and his reply is: "That is a hard question to answer. The country is now at war, and when it is over the condition of things may be changed greatly." It is not a hard question for any other person in the United States to answer.

The term of enlistment of the volunteer army will expire whenever peace is formally declared. There is no authority under the law for reenlistment of the men and it is through a special session of congress will have to be called, as troops will be needed to take care of the conquered territory until local government is fully established.

The impression is general, and a number of newspapers have fallen into the error, that the members of the last legislature hold office until the next regular meeting in January. Such is not the case, and if the governor should call an extra session now, it would be composed of members elected last June. We see no justifiable need of an extra session, however, that would come so close on the heels of the regular. If the allotted 50 days is insufficient to enact needed wholesome legislation, let a special session be called after the body has demonstrated its ability to perform such service.

We have in mind two things in which this nation is decidedly lacking in good sense. One is holding volunteers in the army down to poor and insufficient fare, and low wages, while a long list of officers are fed on the fat of the land and paid salaries far in excess of what their ability would earn them in civil life. The discrepancy is too great. It is not in keeping with the merits of the two classes. It is the result of human greed placed in a position to exact its claims; the taxing of the many for the benefit of the few, observable in so many walks of life. The other is the American spirit which led the people of Portsmouth, N. H., to banquet Admiral Cervera in handsome parlors, feed him on cool ices, and fan him by pretty girls, while our soldier boys were eating hell, drinking hell, and suffering hell's torments down in Santiago. We are a great nation, but we are fools in some respects, and are mightily apt to forget it.

A BLOW TO LAFAYETTE.

Fire Destroys the Bates Flouring Mill—The Best Industry of the Town.

About 1 a. m. Tuesday morning, Will Bates, who was sleeping in a tent at his father's residence above the mill, at Lafayette, was awakened by the light shining from the mill, which proved to be all aflame in the upper story. He reached the building in time to see that the origin of the fire was in the upper story, and the theory is that it was spontaneous in the smut box, or some such place where fire often generates in flouring mills. No fire, other than in the engine, had been started in the mill since last winter. The fire company was on hand promptly and used their new hand engine on the tank of water near the mill. The engine worked splendidly, but the water was soon exhausted, and the fire had its own way. When a Reporter representative visited the scene next morning, hot blazes were still rising from the piles of shorts and charred timbers, and the mass of wheels, shafting, corrugated roofing and other fixtures was a disheartening spectacle. The warehouse adjoining on the north had been filled nearly to its full capacity, there being about 4,000 bushels of wheat therein. This was massed so that much of it was not burned and was being saved and sacked, though Mr. Bates was of the opinion that it was spoiled for milling purposes. It will do for feed, however, and probably half of the entire quantity will be saved for this purpose. Mr. Bates' insurance on the mill and machinery was $5,000, while his entire loss will amount to nearly twice that. The German American held the insurance. The principal losers of wheat are Messrs. Denny and Bluecock. The mill was built by Mr. Suitor about fifteen years ago. It was first a burr mill, but was afterwards changed to the roller process when that became the style. It had a daily capacity of about 50 barrels of flour. The larger warehouse, about 200 feet to the west, was preserved from the flames. Mr. Bates, asked if he would rebuild, said he would see how he came out of this, first. He said it was a good point for a mill, and the town should have one. The writer inferred that there is a probability Mr. Bates will hold the point and reconstruct as soon as he can conveniently reach it. Where he is best known, he is regarded as an excellent citizen and good business man, and his townspeople and those of neighboring towns heartily sympathize with him in his loss.

Doesn't Apply to Eastern Oregon.

Pendleton, Ore., Aug. 18, 1898. Editor Reporter: The popular slang phrase—"You're not so warm," does not apply to this country by any means, as the thermometer registered here the warmest day from 117 to 122 degrees. The government thermometer here registered 119. Several prostrations reported, and some few deaths caused by the extreme heat. Several horses were killed in the harvest fields, mostly on the combined harvesters. They have had two styles of combines here, one style kills horses, while the other proved nearly as destructive to the office seekers that were operating the machine here last June. There is a large crop of wheat here this year, the yield being from 30 to as high as 50 bushels per acre. I feel satisfied that by taking good care and proper dieting, that this trip will prove a great benefit to my health. Pendleton is full of business now, but they tell me that this is the busy season here. The dust is something that Willamette valley folks should never kick about, for this country can outstand the balance of the earth and then have some; and oh, how well I should like to be turned loose in a valley fruit orchard—and so I shall ere long. W. W. NICKELL.

How They Fared.

Frank B. Wire, special correspondent to the Pacific Christian Advocate of Portland, who is a member of Co. I, Second Regiment Oregon Volunteers, writes of the soldiers' fare after this manner: "I will tell you how we fared on our trip since leaving Honolulu. As before they fed us but twice a day. We get bread twice a day. In all, one man gets about three-fourths of a common-sized baker's loaf. We generally have pork or canned horse-meat, and very little of that. We get coffee each meal, but I can't drink it. Sometimes we have rice, once in a while beans. I never knew before in my life what it was to go hungry—I don't mean for one day or two days, but for a week at a time. I think when I get home I won't complain about the fare. We have a big shower-bath rigged up, and I take a bath once a day. I have been on guard three times during the trip. Two out of the three times I have been so sick, mostly from lack of proper food, that I could hardly keep my feet. But it is all in a soldier's life, so I cannot complain. The officers live like lords. They have boiled ham, chicken, veal, beef-steak, potatoes, sweet potatoes, pudding, pie, cake, sauce, ice cream, wine, and everything that is good. If they could be made to eat our grub for about forty-eight hours, I think they would have us fed a little better. It is very easy to stand by with a full stomach and watch the boys march by, and say: "That is good enough feed for any man." If they are not entirely to blame, they are not entirely free from responsibility."

At Camp Jones.

About fifty persons, short and tall, are encamped here at present, and they come and go daily. Wild blackberries are becoming a scarce commodity. Only the extra-industrious and thorough-going bring in full buckets. Huckleberries appear to be fairly abundant. The Deacon says it is a mistake about his getting lost in the mountains last week. He never gets lost; it was another instance of the Indian and wig-wam—the mill may have been lost, at least the fellows who were with him didn't know just where it was. There is where Senator McBride was born, is the stock remark that somebody always makes, pointing to a good-sized, unpainted farmhouse some distance off the road, about eight miles from town on the way to camp Jones. Senator McBride is only one of many eminent persons who have got their early start in Yamhill. The camp has a new attraction this year in the shape of a sulphur spring. There is a distinct flavor of sulphur to the water and the temperature is much higher than that of the other springs, which are noted for extreme coldness and purity. John Bean says the bad taste of the water comes from the decomposed carcass of one of Jones' oxen, that died just above there a year or two ago. The campers are inclined to accept his theory, marveling only at the quantity of sulphur an ox may absorb in time from the rich vocabulary of the average driver. The log chute above the mill is a thing of great interest to visitors. It is 1500 feet in length, with an altitude of about 500 feet at the upper end. The ordinary time it takes a log to come down is 15 seconds, but when the skids are wet they have been known to make the descent in 8 seconds by the watch. This is a speed of two miles a minute, and if you don't believe it, just stand down at the bottom and see the water splash when they strike. A fine belt of timber has been tapped by means of the chute. Mr. Jones remarks that the mill has been in operation 15 years and there is enough timber within reach to keep it going as many more.

DAYTON.

Miss Louise Jones is to teach school this winter in Malheur county. Charlie Scott and Fred Devore have purchased the apples on the Alderman farm. J. D. Lee of Portland was in Dayton on Tuesday. Wesley Brooks has just returned from the coast, and great fish stories he has to tell. Prof. Pool has a school near Troutdale, Multnomah county. D. A. Snyder and John Arms have formed a company for the shipment and drying of fruit. H. H. Alderman, sheriff of Tillamook county, was in Dayton on Sunday. The steamer Hogue is now running in place of the Albany and the Ruth in place of the Modoc, from Portland to Dayton. Mr. Franklin and wife, Mrs. Hunter and Charley Woolworth started for the coast Monday. S. R. Baxter and daughters, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Long, visited Gaston on Sunday. It is now in order to build a carline from McMinnville to Dayton. This monopoly business is no good. Mr. Freeman, south of town, says that he does not mind the aphid eating his wheat, but he does not like to have them bark at his horses as he is cutting. We learn that there are root applications for the position of lock keeper at Lafayette. Mrs. and Arzie Fenton, accompanied by Mrs. Gertie Sweet Rice came from Myrtle Creek on Monday. Many of our good people now want to go to war. Distance in time as well as in space lends enchantment to the view, especially, when the time is past. The infant child of Daniel and Minnie Gibbon died on Tuesday. To hear the way many of our citizens and state papers complain of Secretary Alger and other of our officials, one would think that we were worsted in the late war. Let what Spaniards there are left do the complaining, for the fact is, gentlemen, we licked them. J. W. Fishburn is the first man to put down a concrete sidewalk in Dayton. May others follow his example. Mrs. Robt. Alexander of Portland is visiting with Mrs. J. M. Crawford. G. S. Wright, dentist. Fresh Tillamook cheese and honey at Bettman & Warren's. A new line of tobacco and cigars just received at Bettman & Warren's. The New Home and Wheeler & Wilson sewing machines, needles and extras at C. Grissen's. 15tf

Graduates of McMinnville college are eligible to examination for state teachers' diploma.

The fire bell which the town hose company have been working so faithfully to procure has been purchased, and was raised last evening. The bell is a fine one, with a deep, mellow and full tone, and was one of the best to be had in Portland. It was purchased at a cost of one hundred and thirty-five dollars.—Newberg Graphic.

The Rev. W. B. Costly of Stockbridge, Ga., while attending to his pastoral duties at Ellenwood, that state, was attacked by cholera morbus. He says: "By chance I happened to get hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy, and I think it was the means of saving my life. It relieved me at once." For sale by S. Howorth & Co.

Gaston had a destructive fire Saturday evening about seven o'clock, in which three residences, a butcher and a barber shop were consumed. A Miss Klopfenstein, like other girls, must curl her hair, and for this purpose had lighted a lamp. She then stepped into an adjoining room, and thinks she did not throw the lighted match to the carpet, but is of the opinion that another match was probably dropped to the floor and stepped upon as she left the room. The room was filled with flame when she returned to it. The fire was extinguished finally and kept from spreading by tearing down one house and throwing it into the flames. Klopfenstein, father of the girl, owned the residence and the butcher shop. The other residences were those of Mr. Porter and Mr. Brooks, the former being the only one of the unfortunates who had insurance. J. W. Ballinger of this city was in the neighborhood adjusting threshing machines, and reached the fire in time to lend valuable assistance in checking its spread, but his trouble did not end here. When returning home the harness broke in descending a hill, and the gingerly mare he was driving darted ahead like a flash of chain lightning and closed one of the buggy wheels much after the fashion of closing an umbrella. He slipped a rail under the axle, walked five miles to North Yamhill and hired a team to bring him home. When seen by a Reporter man he was feeling tough, but wouldn't live anywhere else than Yamhill county.

On last Sunday evening a party who gave his name as John Baldwin was found in a partly unconscious condition in a freight car at the warehouse of T. W. Perry on the railroad east of town. He was picked up and brought to town and given medical assistance, when it was ascertained that he was suffering from a stroke of partial paralysis. His arms were entirely helpless and he was otherwise suffering from the stroke. He had gone in the car to sleep the night before about ten o'clock, being in good health at that time. He is reported to be improving at this time.—North Yamhill Record.

Chaperons who saw the act were shocked cold, and other girls, who are mad because they didn't think of this means of self-advertising first, are giving their opinions of Miss Arnold to the press, and they are not complimentary.
