The surprising announcement is made that Judge J. E. Magers will engage in the law business in Portland. A partnership has been formed with D. R. Nelson, his brother-in-law, late of Tennessee, and Attorney-General D. R. Blackburn, Nelson & Magers. They will have rooms in the Sherlock building, near the chamber of commerce. Judge Magers' many friends will regret for their own sakes to hear of his change of location. The Judge has been as intimately identified with Yamhill county and McMinnville interests as any citizen within her borders, for more than a score of years, and no one will gainsay the statement that he has kept labor and duty in the foreground. He will go to Portland about October 1st, but will attend both of the coming terms of court in this county. His family will remain here the coming winter.

The evidences accumulate that the hardships of camp life in the army have in many instances been exaggerated. Mrs. Eckman of this city has received a letter from her brother, who has reached Long Island from Cuba. He says: "We are on the extreme northern end of Long Island and have the finest camp I ever saw in my service. The people on board the ship Minnewaska did unmercifully bleed us when we came over. A cheese sandwich cost 25c, but when we landed the Red Cross society gave us all the tongue, ham and meat sandwiches we could eat and gave us good fresh milk to wash it down. I tell you it seemed good, and the Red Cross also sent chicken aboard for the sick. Here two men have a tent 8x10 and 8 feet tall and mattress covers to fill with straw. Honestly, I could hardly sleep last night on account of being comfortable once more. Last night and tonight we had a big can of about eight gallons dimensions of sweet milk sent to us, and fresh beef and ice to burn. For about a week before we left Cuba I was so weak I couldn't walk over 50 yards, and I had to ride to the ship on a wagon, but I am feeling exceptionally well now, and will take the best of care of myself."

Mr. J. R. Justice and wife are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Apperson this week. A Mrs. Caine, 60 years old, who narrowly escaped the Chilkoat pass snow slide last April, and who assisted in recovering those buried under the snow, was in town last week, selling a scouring preparation to enable her to reach a sister living at Ashland. All her effects were lost in that experience, and she gave an account of the hardship and suffering that was heartrending. To the credit of McMinnville people it may be said that they were very kind in this apparently worthy case.

Happily Wedded.
The parlors of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cooper's residence in this city were the scene of an interesting wedding last Wednesday at noon, when their daughter, Elnora J., one of McMinnville's brightest and best young women, was united in marriage to Prof. R. W. Doane of Pullman, Washington, of the chair of zoology in the state agricultural college. Rev. G. W. Fender of the Cumberland Presbyterian church officiated. The bride wore a neat, purple traveling dress and carried a beautiful bouquet of pure white Nephitis roses, the groom conventional black. Miss Nellie Cooper as bridesmaid, was dressed in a pretty white suit of tucked India linen, with yellow carnations and smilax on the waist and in her hair. Mr. Arthur S. Cooper, brother to the bride stood as best man to the groom. The parlors were profusely decorated with autumn leaves, white lilies, sweet peas and bright red nasturtiums. At one o'clock luncheon was served in a prettily decorated dining room, the table being garnished with LaFrance roses, pink carnations, heliotrope and smilax. Just before their departure the bride threw her bouquet to the little group of young lady guests and the charmed bud was caught by Miss Daisy Young, which signifies that she will be the next to enter the matrimonial state. Many, useful and elegant were the gifts received, but the guests were confined to relatives and a very few immediate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Doane left amid a shower of rice, on the 3 p. m. train for Pullman, Wash., where they will be at home to their friends in the future.

Those present were: Capt. and Mrs. Wyatt Harris, Miss Ethel Harris, Miss Daisy Young, Miss Annie Nichol, Mrs. H. L. Heath, Rev. G. W.
