Representative Butt of Newberg was in the city on Sunday. His course during the special session seems to have been in line with the sentiments of his constituents, and some of his votes ought to please even the populists. He opposed clerks for his committees and opposed paying the hold-up legislature.

N. E. Kegg returned Saturday evening from Kansas City, where he has been selling portable pantries about three months. His work extended as far east as Illinois, and was reasonably profitable, but Kegg is too much of a home man to be absent from his family long, and says the man who can't make a living in Oregon ought to commit suicide, anyway. He was present at the Omaha exposition during President McKinley's visit.

A short time ago The Reporter spoke of the appointment of Wm. B. Turner, formerly of this place, to a clerkship in the public printing office at Washington. We have learned since that the position is even better than that. He is printing clerk in the United States senate, and the duty of construing the statutes regulating the printing for the senate and senators devolves on him, which is a position of considerable responsibility. The Reporter is pleased to learn of this preferment.

A new one-thousand pound bell has arrived for the Baptist church, from the foundry at Hillsboro, Ohio. It is the generous contribution of a brother of Mrs. R. W. The Wave presents some superb views of the Klondike this week, together with a page of pictures from Manila, illustrating the appearance of the city just after the American occupation. The recent regatta at Portland on the Willamette is cleverly illustrated and besides these are views of the young university of Washington and of the process of repaving Market street, San Francisco. The latest gossip from London, Paris and New York, together with its articles and stories of general interest, make The Wave the most readable paper of its class.

Capt. H. L. Heath has forwarded to Mrs. Heath a large chest filled with trophies of war from Manila. The collection embraces a great variety of dirks, swords, fish knives, a hat and cap, a bugle, leggings and sandals, flags, cartridges, etc., and in entirety makes a most interesting and valuable collection. It is placed on display in Rogers Bros' window. Along the same line, Elsie Wright has received from Al Young a variety of swords, guns and foils which render his window a source of much attraction. The collection includes a very ancient sword, which the wisecracks say is not now manufactured, and must be nearly 300 years old. It contains figures of St. George and the dragon. In the Heath collection is a most bloody-looking instrument known as a kris, having a serpentine outline that makes one's flesh creep with the imagination of its destructively piercing capabilities. The collections were not accompanied by any descriptions, and the use of some of the articles is a conundrum. Mauser rifles are among the displays, and the gun seems to impress most spectators as an awkward implement, inferior to the Krag-Jorgenson adopted by the home government.

This is the time of year, when the crops are gathered home and marketed, that a great many excellent people make a business of squaring up the little accounts, including the one with the local newspaper. Allow us to say, in advance, that we appreciate this kind of people, and if there is anything we can do to reciprocate their favors, it is the very thing we are willing to do.

Back to Health
After Long Illness Hood's Sarsaparilla Restored Good Health—Now as Strong as Ever.
"After an illness of two years, during which I underwent several surgical operations, I at last began to improve, but my improvement was so slow that I became discouraged. I was very much run down and I did not have any appetite. I did not care to live. One day I met a friend who had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla and who urged me to try it. I consented, and after I had taken a few doses I began to feel better and had a better appetite. I gained from two to three pounds a week and grew stronger every day. I took two or three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and am as strong as I ever was in my life. Hood's Sarsaparilla has brought me back to health."
