Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Talmage went down to North Yamhill Tuesday to represent the state in the preliminary hearing of one Grace, charged with assaulting S. Jasapis, a Greek by birth and title, with a dangerous weapon. The parties reside in the neighborhood of Moore's valley, and it seems had been partners in the conduct of a small grocery. A disagreement resulted from dissolution and attempt to settle up their business relations. On Monday the parties met in the public highway, got out of their vehicles and were engaged in a wordy controversy when a third party by the name of French joined them. Words and gesticulations grew intense and reckless, and in the heat of the debate Grace drew a 38-caliber revolver and handled it in such a careless manner that it was discharged accidentally, we believe he claimed, while striking at his former partner. The bullet, at any rate, instead of inflicting great bodily injury upon Jasapis, struck Mr. French, the disinterested spectator, lodging in the region of the left suspender, a little below the collar bone, after passing through his mackintosh and coat, but without inflicting any very painful injury. Grace excused his possession of the revolver on the ground that he was afraid of Jasapis, who he claimed was in the habit of carrying a knife. Jasapis, in describing the affair to friends, maintains that he escaped mortal injury by his agility in dodging the bullet from Grace's pistol. The justice, however, bound Grace over to the meeting of the grand jury and he promptly gave bond for his appearance.

A business change of some note took place this week when L. E. Walker transferred his feed and produce market to C. F. Daniels. The sale includes the real estate, consisting of 25x60 feet fronting on D street, besides stock, fixtures and good will. Mr. Walker has conducted the stand for about five years. The new proprietor has an established reputation in the community as a good business man and will make a success of the enterprise.

Died—At St. Vincent's hospital, Portland, Monday, Nov. 14th, Mrs. Minerva Lewellyn, a former resident of this county, but latterly of Colfax, Wash. Death occurred from a surgical operation performed about three weeks prior. The body was brought to McMinnville Monday evening, and the funeral held Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. J. W. Gault, sister of deceased. The services were conducted by Rev. Geo. W. Fender. Mrs. Lewellyn was born Sept. 5th, 1855, her maiden name being Arthur. She was a member of the Congregational church. Three children are left to mourn the loss of a mother, viz: Callie and Ed. Adams, and Jessie Lewellyn. All were present at the funeral.

The first appearance of the McMinnville Amateur Dramatic Co. last Friday night in "A Soldier of Fortune," was greeted by a good house, the receipts being nearly $70. The audience was delighted with the performance, and the occasion was enlivened with classic renditions by the new orchestra. The three E's—Eviden, Eberle and Ekstein, carried the heavy male parts. The people always expect good work from Mr. Eviden, and are never disappointed. Mr. Eberle as the color bearer always pleases, and though not in usual good form, he gave no sign to the audience of any disability, and largely played the role of stage manager while filling his part on the stage. Mr. Ekstein as the Italian villain was a great success. Not a word seemed uttered wrong, nor a gesture out of place, while his make-up was superb. His acting excelled that of most performers who follow the stage as a business. Arthur McPhillips has become the stand-by for old man parts, which is evidence that he can fill them with eminent satisfaction. Harry Sharp was a new man, who did splendidly in the role of young love maker, though he was unfortunate in having to wear that same old mustache that has done service so long and has never been worthy the name. Jesse Henderson, the doctor, was also unfortunate in his whisker make-up, and his acting deserved something more than sheep's wool dipped in ink. It was observed that he went to sleep with his gloves on, but doctors are often overworked. The trio of ladies, Mrs. Hobbs, Miss Sattie Snyder and Miss Mattie Dielschneider carried their parts exceedingly well, the latter two appearing in solo work to good advantage. It would be difficult to find anyone to excel Mrs. Hobbs in "Prueilla" parts, and she has come to a stand-by, also. Lair Thompson in make-up, brogue and acting is a model Irishman, and possesses good stage abilities. Hardy Ballinger worked the "kid" tricks with great skill, and, considering the prominence of his part and the memorizing he had to do, was a decided success. The play was a rather heavy one, and in the last act, particularly, could be shortened with good effect.

Mrs. Mary Stow is reported very ill.

C. Grissen's new stock of wall paper. 6 Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hunsaker arrived home Friday evening from their extended eastern visit. They report an enjoyable time.

About twenty young people went out from the city Saturday evening to Knight Olds' residence, and enjoyed a merry whist party. Supper was served. Flash light pictures were taken of the party by Wm. F. Dielschneider.

The announcement that Wapato lake, just over the border in Washington county, so many years a favorite resort for duck hunters, is to be drained, parceled into small tracts and brought to a high state of cultivation, is welcome intelligence. Instead of appearing like a swampy waste, it should become one of the garden spots of Oregon.

The peace commission in Paris is described and illustrated in the November magazine number of The Outlook, to be published next week, by a staff correspondent in Paris. The article contains sketches of both the American and Spanish commissioners, with portraits of most of them. Jacob A. Riis, the author of "How the Other Half Lives," contributes a graphic article concerning the New York police department. Mr. Riis has had exceptional acquaintance with the methods of the department, and tells the story of many individual deeds of heroism with enthusiastic praise. Edward Everett Hale gives in this issue the eleventh installment of his "James Russel Lowell and His Friends," which will be concluded in the December magazine issue. It deals chiefly with Lowell's life in England when he served as United States minister, and is fully illustrated. Paul Bourget, the famous French essayist and novelist, is the author of a notable story, entitled "Antigone," which portrays with exceeding charm a gracious and lofty personality. Among the illustrated articles in this number are a picturesque account of a visit to the country of Sitting Bull, by Rosa T. Shelton, with many striking pictures of Indian life from original photographs; and an article by Dr. Amory H. Bradford, on Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," with special reference to a beautiful new edition soon to be published, from which some remarkable illustrations are reproduced. ($3.00 a year, The Outlook company, New York.)
