From a copy of the American received from Manila this week we take the following description of how the Tenth Pennsylvania charged a church and cemetery in which the insurgents were hiding: "As they started, their commander gave a regular Indian whoop which was enthusiastically taken up by the men. Cheer followed cheer as they rushed towards their goal. The enemy was appalled. They stood American bullets well enough, but that Indian war whoop and those cheers from the throats of about five companies of the Tenth was too much for them; they were horror-struck, paralyzed for a moment, and for a moment only, and then the greatest activity prevailed to get out of the way of the boys in blue, who could yell so terribly and shoot so straight, and away they went. But not all. Forty-two men and three officers, a captain, a major and a lieutenant-colonel—were invited by the long tons to remain, and they accepted—against their will. They were buried Monday afternoon. A pretty sight it was to see the insurrecto lieutenant-colonel galloping away on his charger with his sabre raised high above his head. He tried his best to escape, but it was no good. Our boys had spotted him and he fell, shot through the middle of the forehead. One of the boys had just managed to catch the defunct lieutenant-colonel's horse when a bullet from a retreating insurrecto killed it. The charge has been pronounced by one and all eyewitnesses, other than the combatants to have been one of the most brilliant yet seen in the Spanish American war. A score or more of prisoners were taken in the two charges."

The millinery openings by the three dealers in this city last Saturday surpassed all effort of the kind ever made before. The displays were ready bright and early in the morning, and were carried over well into this week, probably because a good many thought opening day was held a little early this year. The Mark Sisters, in their new quarters, are fortunate in having an excellent window, and proved that they know how to make good use of it. The dominant color was light blue, and hanging in the center by four trailers was a large bouquet of artificial flowers. The Oregon grape had a part in the garnishment. Mrs. E. S. Warren's display was better than ever. Large use was made of the Oregon grape in border work, both in the window and inside the store, and the variety of hats and colors was great. A souvenir of violets was given to callers as far as they would reach. Her daughter, Mildred, occupied the place of queen and was beautifully dressed in white, surrounded by flowers. Miss Eva Martin had a new departure in her window, for which she is deserving of great credit. It was a little wagon handsomely decorated with flowers, in which sat a large doll in the attitude of driving. The flowers were disposed with consummate taste, and as a piece design it was probably the prettiest thing of its kind ever seen in McMinnville. Over this was a canopy of flowers. In another window Miss Martin had a pattern hat trimmed in lace made in Manila, and sent by Capt. Heath to his wife. The style this year in millinery doesn't seem to run to any particular color, though the brightest shades seem to be given the preference. In the matter of size, the tendency is to make them large, and the decoration of flowers, ribbon and lace is generally profuse. For the benefit of the men, nothing is said about prices. They will find that out later.

Guide by the Past.

You who do not know this store need not accept what we say as gospel truth. Guide by the past. Look up our record. See how we have kept faith with the people. See if we have ever sold any thing but faultless footwear. Some dealers do a deal of talking; their rainbow of promise is a big one, but it is a rainbow sure enough. You follow it only to find that it disappears when you reach the store. Here we endeavor to perform all that we promise. If we say a shoe is so and so, it is so and so, or we take it back at the price you paid us. No guessing at qualities. No risks. We still have a small lot of those ladies' button shoes at 40 per cent off. This is a rare offer. Take advantage of it.
